Tales of Terror Told by Many of 300 Survivors of Submarine Attacks American Freighter Brings Suffering Victims into Bordeaux; Some in Serious Condition

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN

Bordeaux, France, Oct. 20. (AP)—Tales of terror and suffering were told tonight by many of the 300 survivors from two British steamships sunk by a submarine Tuesday off the Atlantic about 500 miles off the Spanish coast.

Those who could manage it sang "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee" as Captain J. McKenzie brought the rescue ship, the American freighter Independence Hall, into port.

Some of the survivors were barely conscious. Many of them had suffered heavily from exposure. Long rows of ambulances were drawn up and corps of nurses were waiting when the small vessel steamed into the harbor.

Precise official figures on the number of survivors from the sunk ships, the City of Mandalay and the City of York, were lacking as well as the number of victims. Estimates of those lost ranged from 100 to 150.

Scores of the survivors were carried off the ship on stretchers and taken to hospitals.

Steward Collapses
An American steward on the Independence Hall collapsed from exhaustion when the ship reached port and he also was hospitalized.

All those rescued were English and East Indians en route to England. A number were in a serious condition from hours in the cold seas.

Many children were among them. About sixty passengers aboard the City of York were rescued.

Walter, a bad case of jitters when a submarine appeared near the ship, said he was engaged in the rescue of survivors from the City of York, Mandalay at dusk Tuesday, they were rescued tonight.

Some of those rescued said that the City of Mandalay and the City of York were grouped with nine other ships being convoyed by warships but became separated in a storm from the convoy after one day out from Gibraltar.

Followed All Day
A submarine described by British passengers as German first struck at the 10,000-ton York after following it all day.

A half hour later the submarine struck at the 7,000-ton City of Mandalay.

The number of passengers aboard was two was over 300.

Putting as much speed as possible on the freighter, Captain McKenzie's crew reached the City of Mandalay first.

Two of the Mandalay's lifeboats were awash, with scores of people struggling in the heavy seas.

Tons of oil were thrown on the water.

A four-year-old baby in a life preserver was rescued, but its mother had died.

As the six Independence Hall passengers did what they could to help and watched the terrorizing of the ship, a submarine believed the time as that which sank the English ships suddenly emerged from the water near the rescue freighter.

Both survivors and passengers aboard the rescue ship screamed in fright, the passengers said, but the submarine merely signaled how many have you saved? It

Small Patrols of British and French Clash in Wooded Areas

By H. TAYLOR HENRY

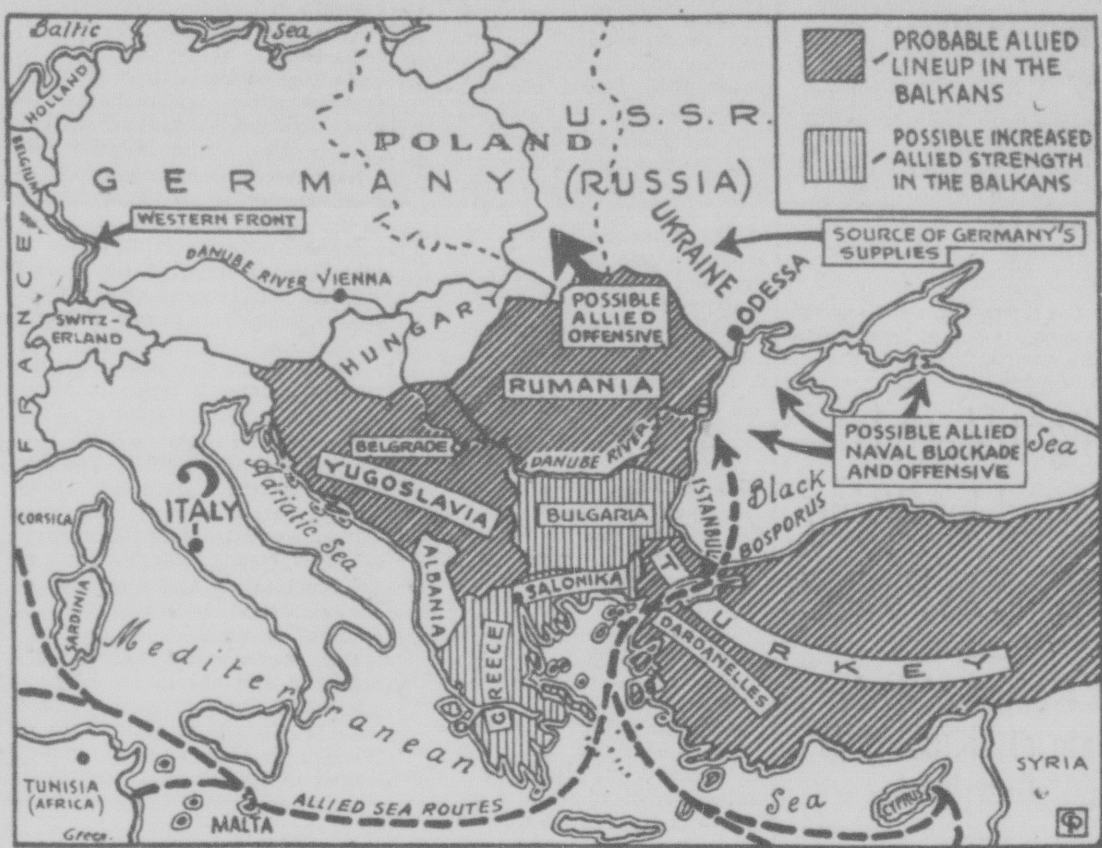

Paris, Oct. 20. (AP)—Small patrols of British and German advance units were reported tonight to have skirmished in no-man's land on the Western Front as the two armies jockeyed for possession of wooded heights and small wooded areas to strengthen their new lines.

Military dispatches from the front indicated that the no-man's land about a mile wide separating the positions of the two forces lay wholly in German territory.

The French line, marking the line of the front, apparently showed almost exactly along the line to which the French withstood before a German attack the week before.

The outpost activity was said to have been confined mostly to the wooded areas where the Germans are reported in force just east of the Meuse river and between Saar-

Firth of Forth Again Visited by German Airplanes

No Bombs Dropped and Nazis Escape British Batteries

By EDWIN STOUT

London, Oct. 20. (AP)—Invading German warplanes flew over the strategic Firth of Forth again today but dropped no bombs and escaped the fire of anti-aircraft batteries and British fighting planes which went up to meet them.

Air attacks on strongholds of British naval might had been expected, one authority said. He added that the performance of defenders in shooting down eight German planes during raids earlier in the week was "encouraging."

On the Western front, British battalions the allied "waiting wall" with fresh troops and counted as a gain every day of mud and every delay of a possible wide-scale German offensive.

British military authorities disclosed that the flow of troops which put 158,000 British soldiers on French soil in the first five weeks of the war had been continued and might soon be increased.

Dig in For Winter
Allied armies gradually being strengthened were described as digging in for the winter in the blockade by land and sea to starve Germany out.

Reviewing the minor "experimental" actions of the week, one authority declared:

"We are one week nearer winter. Each week makes the chance of German large scale operations that much less."

He added that "if we ever expect to win this war" the military resources of the whole empire must be developed. He disclosed that ministers from the dominions would map such developments at a London conference.

The Nazi planes over the Firth of Forth today—the second such flight in five days—flew at extremely high altitudes and defending aircraft took up the pursuit so

Chrysler Company And Union Unable To Get Together

Detroit, Oct. 20. (AP)—Chrysler Corporation and the CIO-United Automobile Workers failed again today to progress materially in their parleys over "slow-down" and "speed-up" and tonight the two offered differing views on a settlement proposal.

The corporation charging the union with rejecting a "reasonable proposal" for governing production standards, went on to accuse it of using "talk about 'speed-up'" as a "smoke screen to disguise its demand for a union shop."

R. J. Thomas, union president, in turn asserted that Chrysler had proposed an agreement similar to the union's contract of 1937 with General Motors Corporation, and he said this was unsatisfactory because it failed to call for "joint time studies."

"In practice," Thomas said, however, "we have had joint time studies in G. M. plants, and the results have been the basis for mutual agreement on the speed of operations."

The union demands a voice in controlling production speed. Chrysler has claimed that is a "function of the management." With the dispute in its 15th day, 57,500 auto factory workers remained idle.

Herman L. Wecker, Chrysler vice president in charge of operations, said tonight the corporation had proposed a contract provision under which plant managements would consider "reasonable working capacities" of employees.

This provision, he said, was "flatly rejected" by union conferences.

"This rejection of a reasonable proposal relating to production standards again shows clearly that the union's talk about 'speed-up' is a smoke screen set up to disguise its demand for a union shop—which in effect becomes a closed shop," he said.

The goal of the union is the closed shop—with shop stewards overruling the plants. The basis of Marxist Communist doctrine is control of production. When shop stewards handle the throttle of production, you have surrendered the plant."

Nazis Angered by Turkey's Signing Pact with Allies

"Britain's Stooze" Epithet Hurled by Furious Germans

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Oct. 20. (AP)—Nazis tonight declared Turkey became "Britain's stooze" when she signed a mutual aid pact with the Allies and could no longer be regarded as a neutral.

Adolf Hitler received a personal report on the tri-power pact from his ace trouble-shooter, Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey.

Von Papen arrived in Berlin today after a hurried trip from Ankara. He was expected to return to his post within a few days.

Although German political leaders professed to see a loophole in the pact in Turkey's reservation against being drawn into war against Russia, attacks on the agreement were caustic.

Helps Business Men
The government meanwhile opened a system of special short-term credits for business throughout the Reich, which has been hard hit by the war, to prevent bankruptcies and sharp disruptions in national economy.

Nazi officials asserted Turkey had chosen a "dangerous route" in signing the treaty with Great Britain and France.

Britain and France "want to strew unrest in the Balkans," and "bring Turkey into a dangerous chain," they said.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, informed news commentary, said:

"Loud applause in the English and French press deepened Germany's suspicion that Turkey's mutual assistance pact with the Western powers was not intended as a peace move."

No Quarrel With Russia
Turkey's reservation in the pact that her obligations to Britain and France should not bring her in conflict with Russia was the biggest kernel of comfort Nazis acknowledged finding in the treaty.

Nazis pointed out, however, that this "loophole" would not necessarily prevent Turkey from closing her eyes if Britain desired to occupy the Dardanelles—something Germany should not like to see.

A high command communication reported quiet on the Western Front.

Repatriated Germans continued to arrive in Gothenhafen (Gdynia) and Danzig. Most of those arriving from the Baltic countries were professional peoples—doctors, teachers, artists, lawyers—but from fifteen to twenty per cent were farmers.

Great pride was expressed in official circles over the opening of two furnaces in the new Hermann Goering Iron works at Linz. The works were founded two years ago with the intention of making them Germany's and Europe's largest.

Officials said "all matters in Poland are in a state of flux despite the creation of West Prussia and Posen," who asked for details on the delineation of boundaries, disclosed yesterday.

Japanese Determined To Bring About a New Order in East Asia

Odawara, Japan, Oct. 20. (AP)—Foreign Minister Kichisaburo Nomura declared today that the "determination of the entire Japanese nation to bring about a new order in East Asia is too strong to be changed or affected by the interference of a third power."

Diplomatic observers regarded the Nomura statement as a prompt answer to the strong speech of United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew yesterday in which he said American public opinion was sharply opposed to Japan's military program in China.

Nomura was interviewed here while en route to the Grand Shrines at Ise to make devotions to the Sun Goddess Amaterasu, a traditional pilgrimage customarily made by ministers after assuming a cabinet post. He became foreign minister Sept. 22.

Referring directly to Grew's speech, despite the reported government attitude that it needed no response since it was an unofficial utterance, Nomura said:

"I am planning on having a talk with Mr. Grew. I am glad to hear that he said he would work for American-Japanese good will."

"We are engaged in the reconstruction of East Asia from a broad viewpoint and we hope the United States understands both our aim and our determination."

"Such a new order in East Asia as we advocate is not exclusive or unilateral as some third powers suspect. What we are aiming at is the creation of an East Asia which can contribute effectively to the peace and progress of the world."

Michigan Senator Asserts Lindbergh Insulted Canada

Brown Supports Roosevelt in Speech on Arms Embargo

Washington, Oct. 20. (AP)—A barrage of short speeches from both sides carried the Senate's general neutrality debate toward its close today with Senator Brown (D-Mich.) asserting that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh offered Canada a "gratuitous insult" in a recent radio speech.

The Michigan senator, supporting the administration move to repeal the embargo on arms shipments to belligerents, referred to an address in which the famous flier called for retention of an embargo on "offensive weapons" and virtually demanded that Canada cut her link to Britain.

Asserting that if Canada should be attacked from abroad, the United States would have to defend that country, Lindbergh simultaneously questioned the dominion's "right to draw us into a European war simply because they prefer the crown of England to American independence."

Lindbergh Speech Assailed
Brown charged that Lindbergh was trying to deny Canada the control of her own affairs and thus was encouraging "the spirit of nationalistic imperialism that has cursed the world for centuries and which is the potent poison that has killed peace."

He challenged Lindbergh's statements and his authority to make them. The flier, he continued, speaks on no one's authority whatever but his own, and "does not represent the views of any considerable part of the American people."

"His argument as to the right of the United States to deny Canada control of its own affairs x x x and his unskilled advice that the connection with Great Britain be cut is not only a gratuitous insult to a sister nation. It is based on a wholly erroneous concept of our continental policy."

Amendments Next Week
Because the day's oratory got a number of scheduled speeches out of the way, the administration leadership expected that Monday or early next week would find the Senate ready to begin the consideration of amendments.

Among other speakers of the day, Senator Johnson (R-Calif.), a leader of the opposition and a veteran of the recurring battle for American aloofness from European affairs.

King Boris Seeks Cabinet To Keep Peace in Balkans

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Sofia, Oct. 20. (AP)—Conferring in secret with representatives of every shade of political opinion in Bulgaria, King Boris III tonight continued his effort to form a new cabinet whose nature may have an important bearing on the issue of war or peace for the Balkans.

Up to a late hour tonight, there was no indication that the monarch had been successful in his quest for a successor to the government of Premier George Kiosseivanoff, which resigned yesterday.

Belief was expressed among neutral observers that the issue was being complicated by strong diplomatic pressure from Berlin, Moscow, London and even Rome.

There was some belief that King Boris was sparing time to see what positive effect the breakdown of Turkish-Russian negotiations would have on the Balkans.

Political quarters, whether extreme left or extreme right, were agreed on one thing—that Bulgaria's territorial claims on Rumania and Greece may be pushed or abandoned to the leanings of the new cabinet.

Kiosseivanoff was known as a champion of strict neutrality, and it was generally believed that Bulgaria would wish to make a definite stand through the new government.

Whether she will strengthen her relations with her historic Russian protector in the hope of recovering her territories to make her peace with her little neighbors to preserve the Balkans for Balkan people was the question in Bulgarian minds tonight.

French Army Now On Western Front On a Large Scale

Nearly All Available Men Are Taken into Military Service

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Oct. 20. (AP)—(Passed by Field Censor)—French forces have mobilized on the Western front on a scale which makes the British mobilization seem relatively small.

Only the very old and the very young Frenchmen are engaged in peace-time pursuits.

War is a very real thing in this sector. Bridges and hills are crowned with monuments of the war of twenty years ago. An hour's drive from Paris takes one past a dozen or more cemeteries. French and British alike lie there.

Everyone you meet has someone—sons, brothers, husbands or fathers—in the army.

Boys of twelve and thirteen are doing the work of men in villages and on the farms. Women are trying to take their husband's places in the workaday world.

British troops occupy most of this sector. Trucks rattle and bang through villages rebuilt over the scars of the last war.

The villagers don't wave or cheer. They glance up, then go on with their work. Troops in battle array are an everyday sight.

British military police direct traffic and British Tommies bargain for souvenirs and food.

British officers see fresh barriers to Germany's mechanized army in the mud brought on by steady rain which made the likelihood of attack appear to grow less and less each day.

The Royal Army Service Corps, however, is ironing out difficulties in bringing up supplies and the British front has been consolidated in spite of the inclement weather.

Chicago, Oct. 20. (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd saw for the first time today the giant 37-ton cruiser he will take to the Antarctic next month and said he hoped the ponderous "camp on wheels" would revolutionize Polar exploration.

"I hope that we can explore in one month as much ice-covered territory as all previous expeditions combined," he declared.

Byrd and the four men selected to operate the 55-foot, DASHUND-shape cruiser, studied in detail the complex system of motors and gadgets designed to roll the traveling camp on huge rubber tires across the ice cap.

Last-minute delays in constructing the cruiser may force cancellation of test runs on the Indiana sand dunes, selected because the slippery, rolling surface resembles Antarctic ice conditions. Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, designer of the vehicle and scientific director of the Armour Institute of Technology, said, "Our deadline," said Dr. Poulter, "is the freezing of the Antarctic waters which are only open two months a year. We must leave Boston the first week in November, regardless of tests."

The cruiser, painted bright orange to be visible from the air, carries an airplane on its roof twenty feet above the ground, and has living quarters for a driver-mechanic, a radio operator, an airplane pilot, and a scientist.

During three years of rigorous winter weather, the crew will live in an electrically heated and lighted room ten feet square, equipped with rugs, upholstered chairs, folding bunks, insulated walls, even electric razors.

They will cook their own food on an electric stove in a kitchen six feet square, which will also serve as a dark room for the hundreds of aerial photographic maps which the expedition expects to take.

Largest Creditors Are Banks, The Standard Oil Company and Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

San Francisco, Oct. 20. (AP)—The San Francisco World's Fair management filed proceedings under a special section of the emergency bankruptcy laws in federal court late today, stating help of the court was sought for "an orderly and equitable liquidation of its affairs."

The petition listed debts of $4,606,914.

The proceedings were filed under chapter 11, a section of the bankruptcy laws to enable a composition of debts for unsecured creditors. Suits may be filed in this way only by those threatened with involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, attorneys explained.

Assets Not Evaluated
Assets were listed but not evaluated in the petition. The list contained chiefly a description of the various buildings of the Golden Gate International Exposition, and of the concessions, preparing today for an expected record week-end attendance, as the advanced October 29 closing date nears.

The fair board of managers obtained from Federal Judge Harold Louderback a restraining order under which the exposition may continue to operate under its present control, until the closing date.

Randall Larson, attorney who filed the proceeding, said current payrolls and expenses undoubtedly could be met but that the managers considered the court move necessary to insure an "equitable" distribution.

Biggest Creditors
Biggest creditors are banks, the Standard Oil Co., of California and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. The fair's unpaid Light and Power Company Bill is about $677,000. It owes the Standard Oil Company $682,000 and nearly $226,000 to each of six banks.

Meanwhile, a group of promoters struggling to raise funds for a fair re-opening next year said the "outlook is promising."

Dan E. London, chairman of the 1940 fair committee, asserted the drive would continue, although so far only $700,000 of a needed $1,650,000 has been pledged.

New Energy Wallop Packed into Pemmican

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 20. (AP)—A Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist said today he had packed a new energy wallop into the pemmican of Admiral Byrd's Antarctic explorers—and made the old Indian trail food as tasty as something mother used to bake.

Back from recent explorations through the cook book, Dr. Robert S. Harris reported he had developed a new formula, giving more calories per ounce of the concentrated he-man's ration than anything in that line that has yet hit the trail in Polar regions.

The new pemmican—three tons of which will be shipped for the admiral and his men on their coming Antarctic trek—has the further advantage, Harris said, of being pre-cooked, and having a "nicer flavor" than previous trail dishes eaten by the adventurers.

Boosting of the caloric content, the scientist explained, came from using a higher ratio of fat in preparing the twenty-ingredient mixture from materials ranging from barley and beef to hydrogenated fat and onions.

Tales of Terror Told by Many of 300 Survivors of Submarine Attacks

American Freighter Brings Suffering Victims into Bordeaux; Some in Serious Condition

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN

Bordeaux, France, Oct. 20. (P)—Tales of terror and suffering were told tonight by many of the 300 survivors from two British steamships sunk by a submarine Tuesday at the Atlantic about 500 miles off the Spanish coast.

Those who could manage it sang "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee" as Captain J. McKenzie brought the rescue ship, the American freighter Independence Hall, into port.

"His argument as to the right of the United States to deny Canada control of its own affairs x x x and his unskilled advice that the connection with Great Britain be cut is not only a gratuitous insult to a sister nation. It is based on a wholly erroneous concept of our continental policy."

Amendments Next Week

Because the day's oratory got a number of scheduled speeches out of the way, the administration leadership expected that Monday or early next week would find the Senate ready to begin the consideration of amendments.

Among other speakers of the day Senator Johnson (R-Calif.), a leader of the opposition and a veteran of the recurring battle for American aloofness from European affairs.

King Boris Seeks Cabinet To Keep Peace in Balkans

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Sofia, Oct. 20. (P)—Conferring in secret with representatives of every shade of political opinion in Bulgaria, King Boris III tonight continued his efforts to form a new cabinet whose nature may have an important bearing on the issue of war or peace for the Balkans.

Up to a late hour tonight, there was no indication that the monarch had been successful in his quest for a successor to the government of Premier George Kiosevanoff, which resigned yesterday.

Belief was expressed among neutral observers that the issue was being complicated by strong diplomatic pressure from Berlin, Moscow, London and even Rome.

There was some belief that King Boris was sparring for time to see what positive effect the breakdown of Turkish-Russian negotiations would have on the Balkans.

Political quarters, whether extreme left or extreme right, were agreed on one thing—that Bulgaria's territorial claims on Rumania and Greece may be pushed or abandoned to the leanings of the new cabinet.

Kiosevanoff was known as a champion of strict neutrality, and it was generally believed that Bulgaria would wish to make a definite stand through the new government.

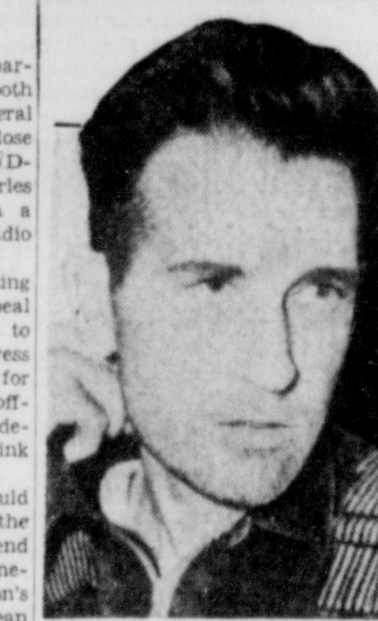

Whether she will strengthen her relations with her historic Russian protector in the hope of recovering her territories to make her peace with her little neighbors to preserve the Balkans for Balkan people was the question in Bulgarian minds tonight.

Pheasant Wounds Driver

Whittemore, Ia., Oct. 20. (P)—After taking twelve stitches to close the cut in Delbert Johnson's face and head, a surgeon worked seven hours removing particles of glass embedded there. A pheasant crashed through the windshield of Johnson's car, losing its life, and lacerating the driver.

Help of Court Asked in Effort To Liquidate Its Debts in Equitable Way

WRECK SUSPECT

Olin Graves

Olin Graves, laborer, was held for observation at Los Angeles after railroad detectives and federal agents said they had placed him in the vicinity of Elko, Nev., at time of the disastrous wreck of the steamliner, City of San Francisco, in which twenty-five persons died.

French Army Now On Western Front On a Large Scale

Nearly All Available Men Are Taken into Military Service

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Oct. 20. (P)—(Passed by Field Censor) — French forces have mobilized on the Western front on a scale which makes the British mobilization seem relatively small.

Only the very old and the very young Frenchmen are engaged in peace-time pursuits.

War is a very real thing in this sector. Bridges and hills are crowned with monuments of the war of twenty years ago. An hour's drive from Paris takes one past a dozen or more cemeteries. French and British alike lie there.

Everyone you meet has someone—sons, brothers, husbands or fathers—in the army.

Boys of twelve and thirteen are doing the work of men in villages and on the farms. Women are trying to take their husband's places in the workaday world.

British troops occupy most of this sector. Trucks rattle and bang through villages rebuilt over the scars of the last war.

The villagers don't wave or cheer. They glance up, then go on with their work. Troops in battle array are an everyday sight.

British military police direct traffic and British Tommies bargain for souvenirs and food.

British officers see fresh barriers to Germany's mechanized army in the mud brought on by steady rain which made the likelihood of attack appear to grow less and less each day.

The Royal Army Service Corps, however, is ironing out difficulties in bringing up supplies and the British front has been consolidated in spite of the inclement weather.

Byrd Inspects "Camp on Wheels"

He Will Take into the Antarctic

Chicago, Oct. 20. (P)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd saw for the first time today the giant 37-ton cruiser he will take to the Antarctic next month and said he hoped the ponderous "camp on wheels" would revolutionize Polar exploration.

"I hope that we can explore in one month as much ice-covered territory as all previous expeditions combined," he declared.

Byrd and the four men selected to operate the 55-foot, Dachtshund-shaped cruiser, studied in detail the complex system of motors and gadgets designed to roll the traveling camp on huge rubber tires across the ice cap.

Largest Creditors Are Banks, The Standard Oil Company and Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

San Francisco, Oct. 20. (P)—The San Francisco World's Fair management filed proceedings under a special section of the emergency bankruptcy laws in federal court late today, stating help of the court was sought for "an orderly and equitable liquidation of its affairs."

The petition listed debts of $4,606,914.

The proceedings were filed under chapter 11, a section of the bankruptcy laws to enable a composition of debts for unsecured creditors. Suits may be filed in this way only by those threatened with involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, attorneys explained.

Assets Not Evaluated

Assets were listed but not evaluated in the petition. The list contained chiefly a description of the various buildings of the Golden Gate International Exposition, and of the concessions, preparing today for an expected record week-end attendance, as the advanced October 29 closing date nears.

The fair board of managers obtained from Federal Judge Harold Louderback a restraining order under which the exposition may continue to operate under its present control, until the closing date.

Randell Larson, attorney who filed the proceeding, said current payrolls and expenses undoubtedly could be met but that the managers considered the court move necessary to insure an "equitable" distribution.

Biggest Creditors

Biggest creditors are banks, the Standard Oil Co. of California and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. The fair's unpaid Light and Power Company Bill is about $677,000. It owes the Standard Oil Company $682,000 and nearly $226,000 to each of six banks.

Meanwhile, a group of promoters struggling to raise funds for a fair re-opening next year said the "outlook is promising."

Dan E. London, chairman of the 1940 fair committee, asserted the drive would continue, although so far only $700,000 of a needed $1,650,000 has been pledged.

New Energy Wallop Packed into Pemman

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 20. (P)—A Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientists said today he had packed a new energy wallop into the pemmanic of Admiral Byrd's Antarctic explorers—and made the old Indian trail food as tasty as something mother used to bake.

Back from recent explorations through the cook book, Dr. Robert S. Harris reported he had developed a new formula, giving more calories per ounce of the concentrated he-man's ration than anything in that line that has yet hit the trail in Polar regions.

The new pemmanic — three tons of which will be shipped for the admiral and his men on their coming Antarctic trek — has the further advantage, Harris said, of being pre-cooked, and having a "nicer flavor" than previous trail dishes eaten by the adventurers.

Boosting of the caloric content, the scientist explained, came from using a higher ratio of fat in preparing the twenty-ingredient mixture from materials ranging from barley and beef to hydrogenated fat and onions.

"Our deadline," said Dr. Poulter, "is the freezing of the Antarctic waters which are only open two months a year. We must leave Boston the first week in November, regardless of tests."

The cruiser, painted bright orange to be visible from the air, carries an airplane on its roof twenty feet above the ground, and has living quarters for a driver-mechanic, a radio operator, an airplane pilot, and a scientist.

During three years of rigorous winter weather, the crew will live in an electrically heated and lighted room ten feet square, equipped with rugs, upholstered chairs, folding bunks, insulated walls, even electric razors.

They will cook their own food on an electric stove in a kitchen six feet square, which will also serve as a dark room for the hundreds of aerial photographic maps which the expedition expects to take.

Finland To Send Her Delegation Back To Moscow

Will Renew Negotiations at Two or Three Day Conference

By Lynn Heinzerling
Helsinki, Oct. 20 (AP)—"Morally strengthened" after the Stockholm conference of the four Nordic states, Finland will send her former premier, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, back to Moscow tomorrow for renewed negotiations expected to last not more than two or three days.

Paasikivi will carry Finland's counter-proposals to the Soviet government, which were expected to reflect the will of the northern countries to steer clear of any entangling alliances and to protect their neutrality at any cost.

Another Delegate
The same government spokesman who said Paasikivi would stay no more than two or three days—because of the "character of the discussions"—declared that another delegate might be added to the party "to give it more authority."

A foreign office spokesman said he knew nothing about reports the Russians were dissatisfied with the delay of the negotiations.

The spokesman said the situation was "not very much changed, but after the Stockholm conference we feel morally strengthened."

Finland Prepared
The fact that the Finnish-Russian negotiations were not directly mentioned in a communique issued after the Stockholm conference was considered of little importance here, where it was pointed out that to single out the Finnish difficulties might seem to detract from the united front of the Northern nations.

Finland, with thousands of her citizens removed from the larger cities and frontier villages, remained in a state of military preparedness. Thousands of soldiers were concentrated on Finland's natural "Magnet line" on the eastern frontier which is made up of deep forests and acres of forbidding boulders, lakes and rivers.

Michigan Senator

fairly, told the Senate, with emotional fervor, that repeal of the embargo was "the first false step" that would "place us in the shadow, walking down the bloody path of war."

The purpose of repeal, he continued, was to help the Allies and "Hamstring" Germany.

The repealist, he said, were "gambling" that they could help one side and yet escape war.

"The gamble may be successful, but it is very speculative, and I will not gamble with American lives," he said.

Johnson declared it was "idiotic" to argue that should Germany win American would be menaced by Hitler.

Europe Safe From Hitler
"Hitler will never conquer Europe," he said. "It has never been done by anyone yet. Countless efforts have been made to establish hegemony by force and none have succeeded. The closest approach to any was by Napoleon, and to compare Hitler to Napoleon is absurd."

America, he continued, has little to fear, no matter who should win the war, because the conflict would leave the European nations physically exhausted.

"Hitler could never attack our country successfully," he said. "He would leave behind him revolt everywhere, a resurgent nationalism would likely overcome him, and a guerrilla warfare would be rife. There would ever be behind him the 'bear who walks like a man.'"

"And if by that time we have not dissipated our resources we could stand upon our own shores with our airplanes and carriers and a vastly superior navy, and laugh at his efforts. I hope we have heard the last of the argument—we'll be next."

Our Paramount Interest
"Our paramount national interest is in staying out of the war and preserving our form of government, our economy and our standard of living. War would destroy them."

Senator Ellender (D-La.) followed the Californian with an appeal for lifting the embargo and a reply to the argument that to do so would offend Germany.

"What do we owe this mad dictator, this insatiable devourer of men and nations, this violator of treaties, that we must tread on tiptoe to spare him displeasure?" he demanded.

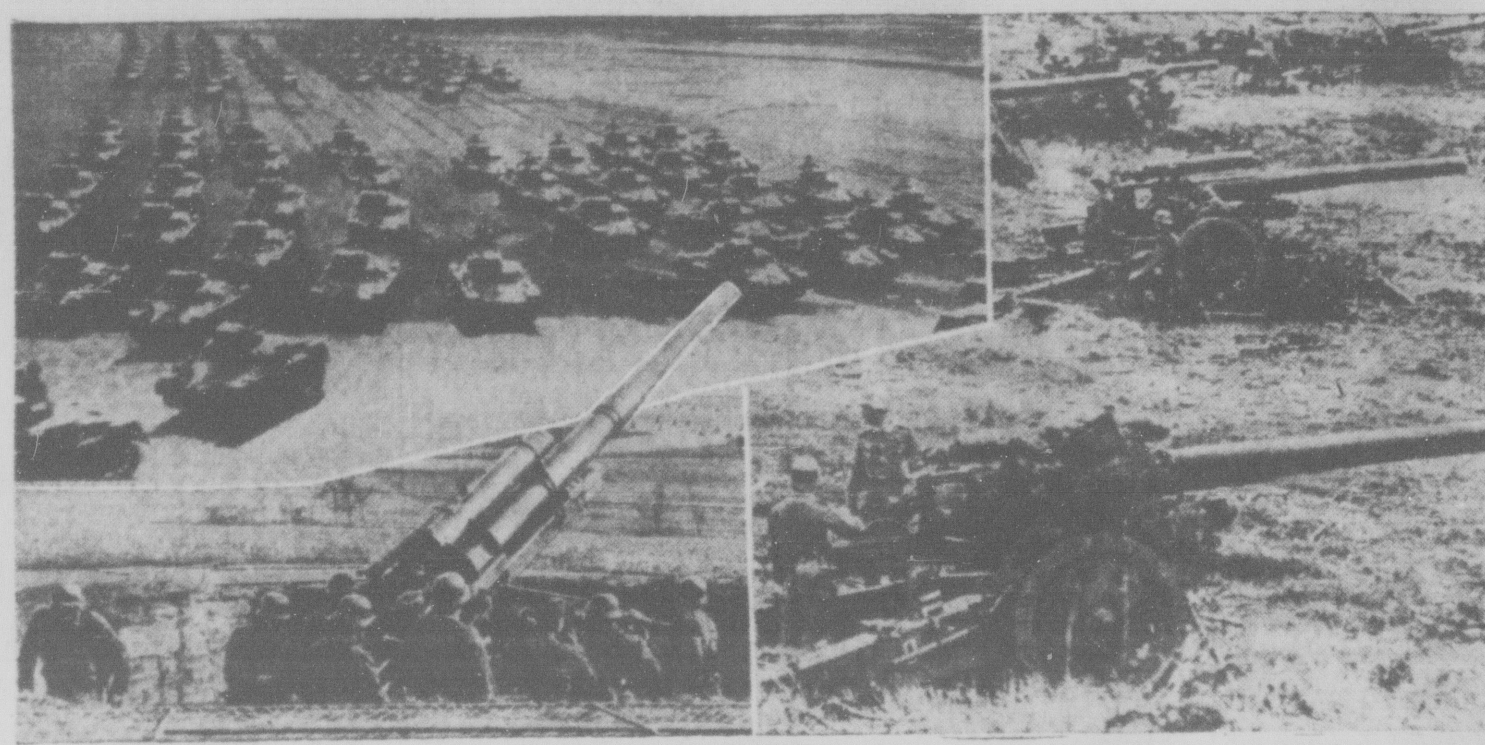

Senator Barbour (D-N.J.) argued for abolishing the embargo on the ground that while the United States, under the Monroe doctrine, must defend Canada if the latter should be attacked, the present law prevents this country from helping Canada arm itself to resist aggression.

Goes Fishing and Catches Large Doe

Colonial Beach, Va., Oct. 20 (AP)—J. T. Drummond went fishing and caught a deer.

While his boat was in the middle of the Potomac river, a good two miles from shore, Drummond saw an object drifting with the tide. It turned out to be a full grown doe, apparently exhausted in an attempt to swim the river. He lassoed the animal, hauled it in and later turned his "catch" over to Game Warden P. H. Gouldman.

TANKS AND GUNS IN GERMANY'S "BIG PUSH"

Roosevelt Silent On Restrictions On Surface Ships

May Extend Ruling Which Bars Submarines from U. S. Ports

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt drew a sharp line of demarcation today between undersea and surface ships of belligerent nations, asserting at a press conference that they were as dissimilar as apples and pears.

He turned aside in this manner a question about the possibility of extending to surface vessels of the nations at war in Europe the restrictions he imposed, by a proclamation issued under the neutrality law, on the use of American ports and territorial waters by their submarines.

Some persons received the impression, however, that since he placed the two types of ships in different categories he invited the interpretation that they were not put in them in the same classification under the neutrality act.

Reporters sought to lead the president to a discussion of the idea that restrictions on submarines involved German naval operations primarily, whereas restrictions on surface vessels would affect the Allies more than Germany.

They started out by inquiring on what basis he had differentiated between submarines and surface warships.

The president said he did not think the two were analogous, telling the newsmen they were trying to add apples and pears which were entirely different things.

Mr. Roosevelt, who arrived from Washington by special train this morning to spend the week-end at his family home, devoted much of the press conference to a discussion of the limits of the territorial waters of the United States.

Those limits, he added, might range from three to hundreds of miles off the coast.

The old three-mile limit of international law, he said, applied to submarines of belligerents, whereas in the case of run runners in the prohibition era the limit was some 150 miles.

In the latter instance, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, the governing factor was the distance small boats could travel for liquor to supply ships hovering off the coast.

The limit of the neutrality patrol, he asserted, was roughly within the safety zone established by the twenty-one American republics at the recent Panama conference.

Then he added that the territorial water limits went as far as necessary for national safety and were in accordance with specific cases involving safety and neutrality.

Thus he altered to some extent a definition given at a recent press conference, at which he said territorial waters extended as far as American interests required.

Predicts End of Hitler in 6 Months

Pullman, Wash., Oct. 20 (AP)—A prediction that Adolf Hitler "will be stripped of his power within six months" came tonight from Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein, Austrian nobleman, lecturer and author who left his country after its annexation by Nazi Germany.

Prince Hubertus told Pullman business men at a banquet tonight the "democratic thinking class" of greater Germany soon might assert itself.

"I would say the change in government will occur by next March," he said. "It will come from action led by military generals and democratic citizens, who will overthrow Hitler."

If the western powers show intelligence in the war it may lead to a revival of democracy everywhere. The United States should play an important part in this reconstruction.

The prince, who recently said he would apply for United States citizenship, asserted he and his princely crew were delaying a trip to England so their first child, expected in January, might be born in this country.

Elinor Troy Says She'll Marry Tommy Manville, but He Says "No"

Hollywood, Oct. 20 (AP)—Elinor Troy, who came here three months ago to enter picture work, boarded a chartered plane tonight for New York, where she said she would marry Tommy Manville, asbestos fortune heir, upon her arrival.

She said Tommy telephoned her this afternoon from New York and directed her to leave at once.

"I never was so surprised in my life," said Miss Troy, who became engaged to Manville shortly before coming to Hollywood. "Tommy insisted that I drop everything and fly east tonight."

At the airport to bid her good-bye was her mother, Mrs. Edna Edmonston of Washington, D. C., who was visiting here.

The wedding would be Manville's fifth and Miss Troy's third.

Miss Troy, 23 and a brunette, formerly was a bubble dancer whose name often was associated with Jack Doyle, Irish singer and boxer. Last year she told New York newsmen she punched Doyle in a night club because he broke a date with her, "and here we'd been engaged for two days."

"No" Says Tommy
New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Tommy Manville denied tonight that he planned to marry Elinor Troy, who was flying from Hollywood in a chartered plane to meet him here.

"No, of course not," said Manville, when he was asked if he planned to marry Miss Troy, "four times is enough, isn't it?"

"Armistice" Halts College Fighting Germany Prepared To Continue War

College Park, Md., Oct. 20 (AP)—University of Maryland freshmen and sophomores operated under an "armistice" today after a night of campus hostilities which left half a dozen combatants with minor bruises.

Reminiscence of clashes five or six years ago, over enforcement of freshmen rules by sophomores, approximately 400 members of the two classes engaged in a battle of vegetables and more-or-less good-natured taunting after the "frosh" defied sophomore supremacy.

The fracas raged from the chemistry building across-campus to the men's dormitories, where Sophomore Class President Bill Holbrook and Freshman Class President Albert Ruppertsberger called a truce and held a "no-man's land" conference.

As a result, the freshmen agreed to observe "rat rules"—governing wearing of frosh caps, following certain paths, speaking to upper classmen and other forms of upper etiquette—until the annual class tug-of-war on Homecoming Day, October 28.

If the freshmen win the tug-of-war, the rules are off; if they lose, sophomore may enforce the rules for the remainder of the semester.

Last night's struggle came after a freshmen class meeting. Ruppertsberger was exhorting his classmates to ignore the rules when Holbrook walked in to lecture the yearlings on the sanctity of tradition. Freshmen co-eds left the meeting hastily and the boys adjourned to the campus.

None of the injured students required hospitalization.

Russ-Turkey Pact Calmly Received By the Italians Aircraft, Yarn Industries Boom

By CHARLES H. GUPTELL

Rome, Oct. 20 (AP)—Italy's calm reception today of the signing of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact was interpreted by diplomats as a new harbinger of continued peace in the Mediterranean.

This calm contrasted sharply with violent attacks on the proposed pact as published last summer. Fascists then condemned the prospective agreement as part of a French-British "encirclement" policy and anti-Italian in effect.

One newspaper in an editorial reflecting Fascist bitterness at that time described the Turks as "traitors by nature."

The serenity with which Rome today received the treaty—which made Turkey a potential enemy in case of Italian military aid to Germany—therefore was taken by diplomats as further assurance that Italy was determined to stay aloof from the war.

Some diplomatic quarters considered it possible that Britain might utilize the situation to promote better relations between Italy and Turkey.

In the absence of official or other comment on the treaty, foreign circles considered significant wide publicity given a French interpretation of the Italian attitude.

According to this view, Italy was favorably impressed with the failure of the Turkish-Russian conversations because of her desire to see the status quo preserved in the Balkans.

While employment increased 12.3 per cent and payrolls gained 6.6 per cent over August in all industry, strikingly greater gains were shown in aircraft and synthetic yarn manufacturing.

In the former, an employment gain of 3244 per cent was shown, while payrolls increased 301.7 per cent.

In the synthetic rayon industry, centered at Cumberland, the employment gain was 544.8 per cent and payroll improvement 612.6 per cent. Pohlhaus noted in his report that a labor controversy had kept a large number of employees idle during August.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20 (AP)—A police radio dispatcher's voice boomed today from a radio in police car 58.

"Go to Aldine and Crispin. There's a fire. That is all."

Two policemen in police car 58 paid no attention to the order. They were already too busy fighting the fire—in police car 58.

Hoover Wants U. S. To Take Stand on War on Helpless

Opposes Selling Bombing Planes and Poison Gas to Belligerents

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover declared tonight that the time had come for America to take a clear and explicit stand on wars against civilians, and that "whatever else may be done about the embargo, America should not sell bombing planes, their bombs, poison gas or submarines."

In an address prepared for an NBC network, Mr. Hoover gave his reasons for his proposal ten days ago of a substitute for either repeal of the embargo or no repeal—a proposal "that in what we do, we seek for a firm basis in broad humanity."

He said his speech was designed partly to "clear up a misimpression" as to his stand on the question of this country's selling arms.

Would Protect Civilians

His proposal, he said, was that this country prohibit the sale of the weapons used to terrorize and attack civilians—bombing planes, their ammunition, poison gas and submarines—and sell the instruments, such as pursuit planes, light observation planes, anti-aircraft guns and their ammunition, which can be used to defend civilian populations against such attacks.

"I propose," he said, "that for the present we limit our arms business right there, x x x."

"Before I proceed I wish to clear up a misimpression as to this proposal. I have not proposed that we divide every kind of weapon used in war into defensive weapons and offensive weapons, nor that we embargo such offensive weapons and sell such defensive weapons on that basis."

"What I have proposed is to limit our basis of action first, to that part of war carried on against civilians, and second, that we confine our action to certain specific weapons which I have named."

Mr. Hoover said "I am not now arguing what will be best for war in general. I am discussing war on women, children and non-fighting men."

Against Bombs, Gas
Bombing from the air and use of poison gas on civilians means, he said, that the world has gone back to savagery. "Chivalry is certainly dying in our world, x x x."

"I am interested in America holding to moral foundations in these times when civilization itself is rocking."

He gave as one reason for his proposal of a substitute for repeal or no repeal of the embargo "to find on this or on some other basis more unity in our own people."

The conflict on the question, he said, "has begun to take on a bitterness that threatens our national solidarity in face of dangers."

"Patriotic men and great groups whose sole purpose is American interest are being denounced as pro-Hitler or pro-British, when in fact they are pro-American. Gradually we are dividing into two camps over a question that is after all very secondary to the dominant question of keeping America out of this war."

Dr. Thaddeus L. Montgomery, of Philadelphia, said belief that twilight sleep is pain free is a popular fallacy. Pain frequently is present but is much reduced.

Dr. Kane said that with paraldehyde about ninety-five percent of the mothers afterward had no recollection of pain, although they recalled some events.

The consensus held there is no single kind of twilight sleep for everyone, but that there are numerous combinations of anesthetics which have to be applied according to individual needs.

The weary crew of the Independence Hall then set out for the Yorkshire but was unable to reach that spot until 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Yorkshire had sunk in nine minutes after it was torpedoed, the survivors said. Those rescued were in lifeboats. The victims long since had disappeared beneath the waves.

Brilliant moonlight aided the crew of the Independence Hall. The freighter, its accommodations already crowded with its own sixty passengers, took aboard approximately 300 more and then turned toward Bordeaux.

Women took turns sleeping in available cabins while the regular passengers deserted for the emergency. Many of them slept on floors. Many were without shoes when they jumped into the icy sea. Bundled in blankets, the men slept on the open deck and in the carpenter shop. Others less hardy were given the heat of the engine room.

Dr. J. H. Ramsey, Harford County Medical Examiner, said a preliminary investigation indicated the scaffold broke.

John Vachino, about 60, of Baltimore, died a few minutes after reaching Harford Memorial Hospital here, Isadore Pucello, 45, of Woodlawn, Baltimore county, died an hour later. Hospital attendants said Vachino suffered a cerebral concussion and Pucello a spinal fracture.

Beagle Speaks To Rotarians To Rotarians Activities of Oakland Club for Several Weeks Outlined

Charles W. Beagle, commander of the Meadow Mountain CCC camp, addressed the regular weekly meeting of the Oakland Rotary club this evening.

Mr. Beagle has been connected with thirteen different camps throughout the country both as educational director and a commander, and spoke concerning his work during that time.

On October 27 the entertainment committee of the club is planning to present the annual Halloween party with appropriate table decorations, and an appropriate program.

November 3 the club will have as guest speaker Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, who will be in Oakland at that time to speak at the annual meeting and banquet of the Oakland Chapter of Future Farmers of America.

November 10 has been set aside for entertaining a group of members of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, Inc., who will present to the club the purpose of the organization. Other business men of the community will be asked to attend this meeting.

November 17, president of the organization and a member of the Conservation Commission, is expected to speak.

The Confederation was recently organized and one of its principal purposes is the development of the natural resources of the counties of Western Maryland and a fuller utilization of the physical advantages with which these countries have been endowed by nature.

Civic Club To Meet
The members of the Oakland Civic club will begin their fall activities with a luncheon meeting on Tuesday afternoon, October 24, at 1:15 o'clock in the Methodist assembly room. It was announced today by Mrs. E. Z. Towler, president.

All members are being urged to attend and all others interested in the work are invited. Reservations may be made by notifying Mrs. Harold Harned or Mrs. Julius B. Littman.

Mrs. Merne W. Kloss will be the speaker, and other parts of the program are being arranged by Mrs. Paul E. Naylor and Mrs. F. D. Blitt.

No New Air Raids
New air raid alarms along the Scottish coast had small significance, except that they showed British defense forces keyed to a new alertness by the Scaevla bombing incident.

But while the belligerent armies appear to have settled into a dull routine of guard duty, there is something active behind the scenes of the political front, along which neutrals, as well as belligerents, are mobilized.

In the capitals of the Balkan and Baltic areas, statesmen are striving to gauge the significance of the Turkish-British-French pact of mutual assistance.

German censors passed a dispatch describing Berlin official circles as "stunned" by actual consummation of the triangular deal aimed at keeping the war out of the Mediterranean. Unnamed German commentators talked of the pact being the seed of a New World war, or at least of extension of the war to the Balkans. Yet they gave no hint of what counterstroke the Nazis may be preparing.

Russia, Italy Silent
Berlin appeared to expect Russia and Italy to react adversely. Yet advice from those two countries gave no intimation that either was meditating intervention in the war.

The Franco-British objective in negotiating the pact was to avert such intervention or involvement. First impressions, at least, even in Berlin, must be that its signature will tend to have that effect; that Allied diplomats have made a start on a Baltic-Balkan neutrality axis to localize the war with Germany.

Of special note is the fact that the carefully drawn terms of the pact leave Russia out of its operation. Just as Berlin has persistently held open a door to rapprochement with France, the Allied-Turkish pact opens a door for Russia to desert her Nazi partner. The Allied move is inspired by hope of isolating Germany, and of an ultimate popular upheaval with the Reich against Hitler's rule. But it is only a hope. And the Nazi fuhrer has yet to speak his mind on that Allied diplomatic coup in the Balkans.

Upton Sinclair Raps "Ham and Eggs" Pension

Los Angeles, Oct. 20 (AP)—Upton Sinclair, Socialist writer and Democratic nominee for governor of California in 1934, emphatically condemned the "ham and eggs" pension plan tonight.

In the manuscript of a radio speech, Sinclair called the plan "menacing illusion." He expressed belief that if the voters adopt November 7, it "will bring chaos and suffering to our state and set back the movement for economic security for many years."

The plan calls for payments of $30 in warrants every Thursday to qualified persons over fifty.

French Machine Gunner Bags German Plane

Paris, Oct. 20 (AP)—Adjutant Charles Legris was cited today in an army dispatch as the first Frenchman in the war to bring down an enemy plane by light machine gun fire from land.

The dispatch said Legris saw two Messerschmidt pursuit planes flying low over Bettwiller, southeast of Sarreguemines Sept. 24 and started firing on the first ship. The plane plunged to earth and the pilot, who landed safely in a parachute, was taken prisoner, the report stated.

Finland To Send Her Delegation Back To Moscow

Will Renew Negotiations at Two or Three Day Conference

By Lynn Heinzerling
Helsinki, Oct. 20 (AP)—Morally strengthened after the Stockholm conference of the four Nordic states, Finland will send her former premier, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, back to Moscow tomorrow for renewed negotiations expected to last not more than two or three days.

Paasikivi will carry Finland's counter-proposals to the Soviet government, which were expected to reflect the will of the northern countries to steer clear of any entangling alliances and to protect their neutrality at any cost.

Another Delegate
The same government spokesman who said Paasikivi would stay no more than two or three days—because of the "character of the discussions"—declared that another delegate might be added to the party "to give it more authority."

A foreign office spokesman said he knew nothing about reports the Russians were dissatisfied with the delay of the negotiations.

The spokesman said the situation was "not very much changed, but after the Stockholm conference we feel morally strengthened."

Finland Prepared
The fact that the Finnish-Russian negotiations were not directly mentioned in a communiqué issued after the Stockholm conference was considered of little importance here, where it was pointed out that to single out the Finnish difficulties might seem to detract from the united front of the Northern nations.

Finland, with thousands of her citizens removed from the larger cities and frontier villages, remained in a state of military preparedness. Thousands of soldiers were concentrated on Finland's natural "Maginot line" on the eastern frontier which is made up of deep forests and acres of forbidding boulders, lakes and rivers.

Michigan Senator

fares, told the Senate, with emotional fervor, that repeal of the embargo was "the first false step" that would "place us in the shadow walking down the bloody path of war."

The purpose of repeal, he continued, was to help the Allies and "Hamstring" Germany.

The repealist, he said, were "gambling" that they could help one side and yet escape war.

The gambler may be successful, but it is very speculative, and I will not gamble with American lives," he said.

Johnson declared it was "idiotic" to argue that should Germany win American would be menaced by Hitler.

Europe Safe From Hitler
"Hitler will never conquer Europe," he said. "It has never been done by anyone yet. Countless efforts have been made to establish hegemony by force and none have succeeded. The closest approach to any was by Napoleon, and to compare Hitler to Napoleon is absurd."

America, he continued, has little to fear, no matter who should win the war, because the conflict would leave the European nations physically exhausted.

"Hitler could never attack our country successfully," he said. "He would leave behind him revolt everywhere, a resurgent nationalism would likely overcome him, and a guerrilla warfare would be rife. There would ever be behind him the 'bear who walks like a man.'"

"And if by that time we have not dissipated our resources we could stand upon our own shores with our airplanes and carriers and a vastly superior navy, and laugh at his efforts. I hope we have heard the last of the argument—we'll be next."

Our Paramount Interest
"Our paramount national interest is in staying out of the war and preserving our form of government, our economy and our standard of living. War would destroy them."

Senator Ellender (D-La) followed the Californian with an appeal for lifting the embargo and a reply to the argument that to do so would offend Germany.

"What do we owe this mad dictator, this insatiable despoiler of men and nations, this violator of treaties, that we must tread on tiptoe to spare him displeasure?" he demanded.

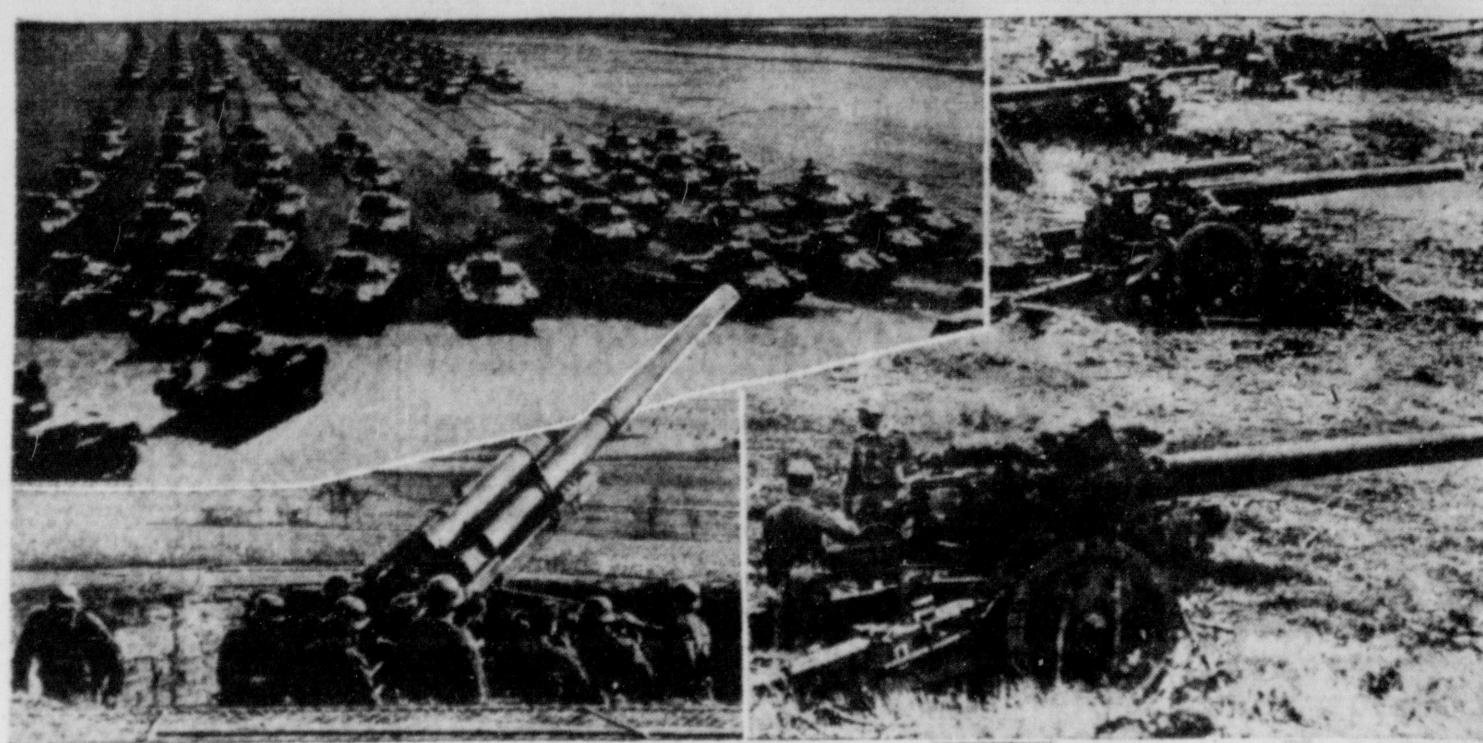

Senator Barbour (D-NJ) argued for abolishing the embargo on the ground that while the United States, under the Monroe doctrine, must defend Canada if the latter should be attacked, the present law prevents this country from helping Canada arm itself to resist aggression.

Goes Fishing and Catches Large Doe

Colonial Beach, Va., Oct. 20 (AP)—J. T. Drummond went fishing and caught a deer.

While his boat was in the middle of the Potomac river, a good two miles from shore, Drummond saw an object drifting with the tide. It turned out to be a full grown doe, apparently exhausted in an attempt to swim the river. He lassoed the animal, hauled it in and later turned his "catch" over to Game Warden P. H. Gouldman.

TANKS AND GUNS IN GERMANY'S "BIG PUSH"

Roosevelt Silent On Restrictions On Surface Ships

May Extend Ruling Which Bars Submarines from U. S. Ports

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt drew a sharp line of demarcation today between undersea and surface ships of belligerent nations, asserting at a press conference that they were as dissimilar as apples and pears.

He turned aside in this manner a question about the possibility of extending to surface vessels of the nations at war in Europe the restrictions he imposed, by a proclamation issued under the neutrality law, on the use of American ports and territorial waters by their submarines.

Some persons received the impression, however, that since he placed the two types of ships in different categories he invited the interpretation that he would not put them in the same classification under the neutrality act.

Reporters sought to lead the president to a discussion of the idea that restrictions on submarines involved German naval operations primarily, whereas restrictions on surface vessels would affect the Allies more than Germany.

He started out by inquiring on what basis he had differentiated between submarines and surface warships.

The president said he did not think the two were analogous, telling the newsmen they were trying to add apples and pears which were entirely different things.

Mr. Roosevelt, who arrived from Washington by special train this morning to spend the week-end at his family home, devoted much of the press conference to a discussion of the limits of the territorial waters of the United States.

Those limits, he added, might range from three to hundreds of miles off the coast.

The old three-mile limit of international law, he said, applied to submarines of belligerents, whereas in the case of run runners in the prohibition era the limit was some 150 miles.

In the latter instance, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, the governing factor was the distance small boats could travel for liquor to supply ships hovering off the coast.

The limit of the neutrality patrol, he asserted, was roughly within the safety zone established by the twenty-one American republics at the recent Panama conference.

Then he added that the territorial water limits went as far as necessary for national safety and were in accordance with specific cases involving safety and neutrality.

Thus he altered to some extent a definition given at a recent press conference, at which he said territorial waters extended as far as American interests required.

Predicts End of Hitler in 6 Months

Pullman, Wash., Oct. 20 (AP)—A prediction that Adolf Hitler "will be stripped of his power within six months" came tonight from Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein, Austrian nobleman, lecturer and author who left his country after its annexation by Nazi Germany.

Prince Hubertus told Pullman business men at a banquet tonight the "democratic thinking class" of greater Germany soon might assert itself.

"I would say the change in government will occur by next March," he said. "It will come from action led by military generals and democratic citizens, who will overthrow Hitler."

"If the western powers show intelligence in the war it may lead to a revival of democracy everywhere. The United States should play an important part in the reconstruction." The prince, who recently said he would apply for United States citizenship, asserted he and his princess were delaying a trip to England so their first child, expected in January, might be born in this country.

Elinor Troy Says She'll Marry Tommy Manville, but He Says "No"

Hollywood, Oct. 20 (AP)—Elinor Troy, who came here three months ago to enter picture work, boarded a chartered plane tonight for New York, where she said she would marry Tommy Manville, asbestos fortune heir, upon her arrival.

She said Tommy telephoned her this afternoon from New York and directed her to leave at once.

"I never was so surprised in my life," said Miss Troy, who became engaged to Manville shortly before she came to Hollywood. "Tommy insisted that I drop everything and fly east tonight."

At the airport to bid her goodbye was her mother, Mrs. Edna Edmonston of Washington, D. C., who was visiting here.

The wedding would be Manville's fifth and Miss Troy's third.

"Armistice" Halts College Fighting

Germany Prepared To Continue War

College Park, Md., Oct. 20 (AP)—University of Maryland freshmen and sophomores operated under an "armistice" today after a night of campus hostilities which left half a dozen combatants with minor bruises.

Reminiscence of clashes five or six years ago, over enforcement of freshmen rules by sophomores, approximately 400 members of the two classes engaged in a battle of vegetables and more-or-less good-natured tussling after the "fresh" defied sophomore supremacy.

The fracas raged from the chemistry building across-campus to the men's dormitories, where Sophomore Class President Bill Holbrook and Freshman Class President Albert Ruppersberger called a truce and held a "no-man's land" conference.

As a result, the freshmen agreed to observe "rat rules"—governing wearing of frock caps, following certain paths, speaking to upper classmen, and other forms of special etiquette—until the annual class tug-of-war on Homecoming Day, October 28.

If the freshmen win the tug-of-war, the rules are off; if they lose, sophomore may enforce the rules for the remainder of the semester.

Last night's struggle came after a freshmen class meeting. Ruppersberger was exhorting his classmates to ignore the rules when Holbrook walked in to lecture the yearlings on the sanctity of tradition. Freshmen co-eds left the meeting hastily and the boys adjourned to the campus.

None of the injured students required hospitalization.

quickly that no bombs were dropped.

"All Clear" in 30 Minutes
Gunfire was heard and civilians saw British aircraft before the warning sirens were sounded. An all-clear signal was given within thirty minutes in part of the area which had been put on the alert and a short time later the alarm had been lifted throughout the region.

The air ministry and ministry of security said that "a number of aircraft believed to have been German attempted to make reconnaissances in the Firth of Forth during the morning and early afternoon."

"Royal Air Force fighters took off to intercept them," the communiqué added, "but they disappeared before contact."

On the home front a national tribunal awarded railway workers the fifty shillings (about $10) a week minimum they asked in a strike which was threatened just before the war broke out but which was called off.

The award is subject to acceptance by the workers and employers. It would involve wage increases totaling about $4,000,000.

About 350,000 Lancashire cotton workers were granted a 12 1-2 per cent wage increase under agreements reached at Manchester.

The board of education started school children gathering acorns and beech nuts to feed pigs. A memorandum sent to 10,000 rural schools said acorns were more nourishing than oats and beans.

Miss Troy, 23 and a brunette, formerly was a bubble dancer whose name often was associated with Jack Doyle, Irish singer and boxer. Last year she told New York newsmen she punched Doyle in a night club because he broke a date with her, "and here we'd been engaged for two days."

"No" Says Tommy

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Tommy Manville denied tonight that he planned to marry Elinor Troy, who was flying from Hollywood in a chartered plane to meet him here.

"No, of course not," said Manville, when he was asked if he planned to marry Miss Troy, "four times is enough, isn't it?"

Russ-Turkey Pact Calmly Received

By the Italians Aircraft, Yarn Industries Boom

Rome, Oct. 20 (AP)—Italy's calm reception today of the signing of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact was interpreted by diplomats as a new harbinger of continued peace in the Mediterranean.

This calm contrasted sharply with violent attacks on the proposed pact as published last summer. Fascists then condemned the prospective agreement as part of a French-British "encirclement" policy and anti-Italian in effect.

One newspaper in an editorial reflecting Fascist bitterness at that time described the Turks as "traitors by nature."

The serenity with which Rome today received the treaty—which made Turkey a potential enemy in case of Italian military aid to Germany—therefore was taken by diplomats as further assurance that Italy was determined to stay aloof from the war.

Some diplomatic quarters considered it possible that Britain might utilize the situation to promote better relations between Italy and Turkey.

In the absence of official or other comment on the treaty, foreign circles considered significant wide publicity given a French interpretation of the Italian attitude.

According to this view, Italy was favorably impressed with the failure this week of Turkish-Russian conversations because of her desire to see the status quo preserved in the Balkans.

Two Men Killed in Fall from Scaffold

By the Italians Aircraft, Yarn Industries Boom

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP)—Paced by the aircraft and synthetic yarn industries, business in Maryland surged upward in September, State Labor Commissioner John M. Polhaus reported in his monthly summary today.

While employment increased 12.3 per cent and payrolls gained 6.6 per cent over August in all industry, strikingly greater gains were shown in aircraft and synthetic yarn manufacturing.

In the former, an employment gain of 32.4 per cent was shown, while payrolls increased 30.1 per cent.

In the synthetic rayon industry, centered at Cumberland, the employment gain was $44.8 per cent and payroll improvement $12.6 per cent. Polhaus noted in his report that a labor controversy had kept a large number of employees idle during August.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20 (AP)—A police radio dispatcher's voice boomed today from a radio in police car 58.

"Go to Aidine and Crispin. There's a fire. That is all."

Two policemen in police car 58 paid no attention to the order. They were already too busy fighting the fire—in police car 58.

Hoover Wants U. S. To Take Stand on War on Helpless

Opposes Selling Bombing Planes and Poison Gas to Belligerents

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover declared tonight that the time had come for America to take a clear and explicit stand on wars against civilians, and that "whatever else may be done about the embargo, America should not sell bombing planes, their bombs, poison gas or submarines."

In an address prepared for an NBC network, Mr. Hoover gave his reasons for his proposal ten days ago of a substitute for either repeal of the embargo or no repeal—a proposal "that in what we do, we seek for a firm basis in broad humanity."

He said his speech was designed partly to "clear up a misimpression" as to his stand on the question of this country's selling arms.

Would Protect Civilians

His proposal, he said, was that this country prohibit the sale of the weapons used to terrorize and attack civilians—bombing planes, their ammunition, poison gas and submarines—and sell the instruments, such as pursuit planes, light observation planes, anti-aircraft guns and their ammunition, which can be used to defend civilian populations against such attacks.

"I propose," he said, "that for the present we limit our arms business right here, x x x."

"Before I proceed I wish to clear up a misimpression as to this proposal. I have not proposed that we divide every kind of weapon used in war into defensive weapons and offensive weapons, nor that we embargo such offensive weapons on that basis."

"What I have proposed is to limit our basis of action first, to that part of war carried on against civilians, and second, that we confine our action to certain specific weapons which I have named."

Mr. Hoover said "I am not now arguing what will be best for war in general. I am discussing war on women, children and non-fighting men."

Against Bombs, Gas

Bombing from the air and use of poison gas on civilians means, he said, that the world has gone back to savagery. "Civilization is certainly dying in our world, x x x."

"I am interested in America holding to moral foundations in these times when civilization itself is rocking."

He gave as one reason for his proposal of a substitute for repeal or no repeal of the embargo "to find on this or on some other basis more unity in our own people."

The conflict on the question, he said, "has begun to take on a bitterness that threatens our national solidarity in face of dangers."

"Patriotic men and great groups whose sole purpose is American interest are being denounced as pro-British or pro-Britain, when in fact they are pro-American. Gradually we are dividing into two camps over a question that is after all very secondary to the dominant question of keeping America out of this war."

remained alongside a short time and then dived once more into the sea.

The weary crew of the Independence Hall then set out for the Yorkshire but was unable to reach that spot until 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Yorkshire had sunk in nine minutes after it was torpedoed, the survivors said. Those rescued were in lifeboats. The victims long since had disappeared beneath the waves.

Brilliant moonlight aided the crew of the Independence Hall. The freighter, its accommodations already crowded with its own sixty passengers, took aboard approximately 300 more and then turned toward Bordeaux.

Women took turns sleeping in available cabins which the regular passengers deserted for the emergency. Many of them slept on floors. Many were without shoes when they jumped into the icy sea. Bundled in blankets, the men slept on the open deck and in the carpenter shop. Others less hardy were given the heat of the engine room.

Two Men Killed in Fall from Scaffold

By the Italians Aircraft, Yarn Industries Boom

Havre de Grace, Md., Oct. 20 (AP)—A 75-foot fall from a scaffold at the Bat-A shoe factory killed two men today as several dozen other workmen watched horrified and powerless to aid them.

Dr. J. H. Ramsey, Harford County Medical Examiner, said a preliminary investigation indicated the scaffold broke.

John Vachino, about 60, of Baltimore, died a few minutes after reaching Harford Memorial Hospital here. Isadore Pucello, 45, of Woodlawn, Baltimore county, died an hour later. Hospital attendants said Vachino suffered a cerebral concussion and Pucello a spinal fracture.

The shoe factory is under construction at Belcamp, near Havre de Grace.

Beagle Speaks To Rotarians

Activities of Oakland Club for Several Weeks Outlined

Charles W. Beagle, commander of the Meadow Mountain CCC camp, addressed the regular weekly meeting of the Oakland Rotary club this evening. Mr. Beagle has been connected with thirteen different camps throughout the country both as educational director and a commander, and spoke concerning his work during that time.

On October 27 the entertainment committee of the club is planning to present the annual Halloween party with appropriate table decorations, and an appropriate program.

November 3 the club will have as guest speaker Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, who will be in Oakland at that time to speak at the annual meeting and banquet of the Oakland Chapter of Future Farmers of America.

November 10 has been set aside for entertaining a group of members of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, Inc., who will present to the club the purpose of the organization. Other business men of the community will be asked to attend this meeting.

J. H. Gambrell, Jr., president of the organization and a member of the Conservation Commission, is expected to speak.

The Confederation was recently organized and one of its principal purposes is the development of the natural resources of the counties of Western Maryland and a fuller utilization of the physical advantages with which these counties have been endowed by nature.

Civic Club To Meet

The members of the Oakland Civic club will begin their fall activities with a luncheon meeting on Tuesday afternoon, October 24, at 1:15 o'clock in the Methodist assembly room. It was announced today by Mrs. E. Z. Tower, president.

All members are being urged to attend and all others interested in the work are invited. Reservations may be made by notifying Mrs. Harold Harned or Mrs. Julius B. Littman.

Mrs. Merne W. Kloos will be the speaker and other parts of the program are being arranged by Mrs. Paul B. Naylor and Mrs. F. D. Bittie.

No New Air Raids

New air raid alarms along the Scottish coast had small significance, except that they showed British defense forces were in a new alertness by the Scapa Flow bombing incident.

But while the belligerent armies appear to have settled into a dull routine of guard duty, there is something active behind the scenes of the political front, along which neutrals, as well as belligerents, are mobilized. In the capitals of the Balkan and Baltic areas, statements are striving to gauge the significance of the Turkish-British-French pact of mutual assistance.

German censors passed a dispatch describing Berlin official circles as "stunned" by actual consummation of the triangular deal aimed at keeping the war out of the Mediterranean. Unnamed German commentators talked of the pact being the seed of a New World war, or at least of extension of the war to the Balkans. Yet they gave no hint of what counterstroke the Nazis may be preparing.

Russia, Italy Silent
Berlin appeared to expect Russia and Italy to react adversely. Yet advice from those two countries gave no intimation that either was meditating intervention in the war.

The Franco-British objective in negotiating the pact was to avert such intervention or involvement. First impressions, at least, even in Berlin, must be that its signature will tend to have that effect; that Allied diplomats have made a start on a Baltic-Balkan neutrality axis to localize the war with Germany.

Of special note is the fact that the carefully drawn terms of the pact leave Russia out of its operation. Just as Berlin has persistently held open a door to rapprochement with France, the Allied-Turkish pact opens a door for Russia to desert her Nazi partner. The Allied move is inspired by hope of isolating Germany, and of an ultimate popular upheaval with the Reich against Hitler's rule. But it is only a hope. And the Nazi fuhrer has yet to speak his mind on that Allied diplomatic coup in the Balkans.

Raskob's Daughter Weds C. A. Borinson

Centerville, Md., Oct. 20 (AP)—Charles A. Borinson, Avondale, Pa., banker and Miss Josephine Raskob, daughter of John J. Raskob, former democratic national committee chairman, were married today by Bishop Edmund J. Fitzmaurice of Wilmington.

The ceremony was performed in our mother of sorrows catholic church. The bride, attended only by her sister, Miss Margaret L. Raskob, was given in marriage by her father. Addition Fox of Cynwyd, Pa., was best man.

A reception of the Raskob pioneer point farm near here followed the ceremony. After their wedding trip, the couple will live at Avondale.

French Machine Gunner Bags German Plane

Paris, Oct. 20 (AP)—Adjutant Charles Legris was cited today in an army dispatch as the first Frenchman in the war to bring down an enemy plane by light machine gun fire from land.

The dispatch said Legris was two Messerschmidt pursuit planes flying low over Bettwiller, southeast of Sarreguemines Sept. 24 and started firing on the first ship. The plane plunged to earth and the pilot, who landed safely in a parachute, was taken prisoner, the report stated.

Upton Sinclair Raps "Ham and Eggs" Pension

Los Angeles, Oct. 20 (AP)—Upton Sinclair, Socialist writer and Democratic nominee for governor of California in 1934, emphatically condemned the "ham and eggs" pension plan tonight.

In the manuscript of a radio speech, Sinclair called the plan a "menacing illusion." He expressed belief that if the voters adopt November 7, it will bring chaos and suffering to our state and set back the movement for economic security for many years.

The plan calls for payments of $30 in warrants every Thursday to qualified persons over fifty.

Reorganization of Army into 9 Corps Now Contemplate

Each Corps Will Have 40,000 Troops, Reliable Source Says

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—Reorganization of the army to form nine highly mobile corps of more than 40,000 troops each is contemplated by the war department, reliable sources said today.

The program was described by members of congressional military committees as a part of efforts to weld the present scattered units of troops into a force which would be ready for any emergency.

Putting it into full effect depends on congressional approval of any increases recommended to President Roosevelt by the war department. These call for expansion of the regular army by 53,000 men to its full peace-time limit of 280,000, and expansion of the national guard by 65,000 men to 320,000.

First steps of the contemplated reorganization already have been taken, however, with the orders for five "streamlined" regular army divisions to undergo special training this winter in the south and north west.

Each of the projected new corps would be composed of one regular army division and two guard divisions, plus special auxiliary troops. The corps in turn would be grouped into four field armies, such as exist now in skeleton form.

Other defense developments included announcement that two national guard units would be formed in Alaska, and that 125 additional ordnance reserve officers had been summoned to active duty.

Nor is either side likely to attack in force until the weapons of highly mechanized warfare can be brought into full play. Mud and water can do more to halt tanks and armor than bullets or bombs.

The leading downpours along the Franco-German frontier have added greatly to the improbability of any early attempt by either side at decisive military action.

Sinus Diseases Are Products Of Civilization

Increase in Frequency in Proportion to Degree of Modernness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A great deal of progress has been made in dealing with the chronic infection of the nose known as sinus disease. This condition is so common in temperate but rapidly variable climates, it has been estimated that four out of every five of us suffer from sinus disease at some time during our lives.

Sinus disease increases in frequency directly in proportion to the degree of modernness of the civilization we are living in. The more crowding, the more machines to turn up dust and the more smoke to obscure sunshine, the more sinus disease.

Lowered immunity due to a codified form of existence also plays a part in promoting nasal and paranasal infection. Our overheated houses dry out the lining of the nose and prevent its natural germ-killing functions. Refined foods lacking in natural vitamin qualities add to the unfavorable condition. The occurrence of sinus disease is inversely proportional to the amount of sunshine. Since four-fifths of the people have some sinus trouble some of the time, and since it is an infectious disease, the multiplicity of human contacts is an evident factor.

Dryness and dust are the great "enemies" of the sinus sufferer.

The head has four pairs of air cavities, called sinuses. Each opens into the nose cavity, and the lining membrane of these cavities is continuous with that of the nose. A cone-shaped roll of thin bone covered with mucous membrane, called a turbinate, guards the orifice of each sinus on the nasal side against dry, cold, dusty and polluted air. The spongy turbinate, rich in blood vessels, warms and filters the air we breathe.

There should normally be a free intake and outgo of air in the nose. When the turbinates swell due to infection or irritation, they block the opening of the sinuses. If infection is present, the drainage is interfered with, and a subacute or chronic infection is inevitable.

The first function of the sinuses is to furnish lightness to the skull. If the skull were solid bone, the muscular strength of the neck and shoulder muscles would have to be tremendous to hold it up. The other alternative would be to diminish the size of the skull, which would mean diminishing the size of the brain. If we had no sinuses, we would never look or, else, never be the same. The sinuses are the result of a good engineering job on the part of Nature. Their other function is to furnish a resonator for the voice.

The commonest type of sinus disease is that which complicates a "head cold" and makes it hang on.

The chronic types are infections, allergic and vasomotor. In treating the infectious type, infected lymphoid masses in the back of the nose can be destroyed by electro-surgery. Establishment of drainage is required. Deep penetrating heat, by means of long or short wave diathermy, is efficacious after drainage is established. A simple apparatus for circulating hot water through rubber tubes high in the nose is also helpful. Marked improvement occurs by using a diet rich in fresh foods. Allergic sinusitis is relieved by removing the offending substance in food or dust. Vasomotor sinusitis is best treated by repeated shrinking of the mucous membrane.

Questions and Answers

E. O.: "I have been informed that a corset or any tight girdle worn about the body will cause the insides to become weak and flabby. Is that true?"

Answer—Naturally, any artificial support will tend to cause the muscles to get weak, but this is less true of a corset than any other form of support. Many people need an abdominal support, such as a corset. The old traditions about the harm of corsets are great exaggerations.

Can't Shine If Nose Does

By HELEN FOLLETT

DOES your nose shine? Does that make you mad? Well, then, do something. A shining nose won't win many laurels.

At bedtime, after the face washing, dip a piece of gauze in a saturated solution of boric acid. You make that by dissolving one teaspoonful of powdered boric acid in a cup of water. Use it cold. Keep on changing the pad as the liquid dries out. Every morning apply cold water freely. You can use a little cream if you will remove it in a few minutes. Select a light powder and don't try it in the water pad.

Drink plenty of water. Cut down on pastries; they excite the sebaceous glands.

Nobody knows why a growth of hair appears on a woman's face. It may come in young womanhood, in middle age, in old age. The most reasonable guess is that this unsightly blemish is due to some glandular disturbance. It has been pretty definitely proved that the use of oily cosmetics is not a factor.

Each little bristle sprouts from a papilla which is deep within the fabric of the skin. The electric needle is inserted in the pore beside the shaft, is forced gently to the root. When the current is turned on, the papilla is destroyed. A new hair cannot form. The shaft is removed with the tweezers. If it puts up resistance, the papilla is still active, so the needle must go back a second time.

The success of this treatment depends upon the experience and skill of the operator. If she does her work conscientiously, there will be no returned hairs. Too strong a current will cause scars, but a strong current is not necessary. The discomfort is slight. Thousands of women have had these treatments and with success.

Since each hair must be treated individually, electrolysis is not suitable for growths on the arms and legs. Several sittings are necessary because the hairs treated must not be close together.

PATRICIA MORISON . . . careful attention keeps shine from nose.

Reducing the size of the bust is no easy job, can't be done in a week or a month. Massage is out of the question because there is danger of injuring the delicate glands.

Try exercises. They tighten up slack tissue and reduce measurements.

Lie on the back on the floor, hands out at the sides. Keep the hands and arms flat on the floor, throw your chin up and head back, lift the chest and shoulders. There will be a hard pull on the muscles of the upper part of the torso.

Stand erect, hands clasped in front of the chest. Move the elbows from side to side, pulling the hands away from each other, but still holding them together.

Give the Teacher A Decent Break, Dr. Myers Says

Parents Should Consult Her When Child Complains

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

We parents want our children to get along well at school. Their successes at school will depend chiefly on the teacher—how she feels toward the child and how he feels toward her. But their attitude toward each other may depend primarily upon us parents, and our attitude toward the teacher.

The child, even in the first grade, easily senses our approval or disapproval of the teacher. He does so from our remarks about the teacher in his presence, and from our emotional response to his remarks about her or the school. Not only by our remarks, even by the way we look and breathe, do we betray to the child how we feel toward the teacher.

The child, especially in the elementary grades, naturally talks about his experiences at school. If he supposes he has been wronged by the teacher, he is likely to say so. Moreover, he might drop, unaware, some information about the teacher and her ways which will strike the parent unfavorably. In any event, the human thing for the parents to do is to condemn the teacher then and there, right before the child. Yet, it usually is about the worst possible thing to do.

Speak disapprovingly of the teacher in the child's presence, or encourage him to magnify his complaints against her, and the child grows more antagonistic toward her.

Then what? The teacher grows more antagonistic toward the child and the child is less likely to conduct himself well at school, surely less likely to learn there at his best.

But the teacher is not always right. Even when she isn't, the parent can't fire her. The practical thing is to make the most of it. If the parent is sure there are wrongs to be corrected, she might properly go to see the teacher, after waiting and praying for self-control and poise. In most cases, however, the parent will be wise to say nothing against the teacher in the presence of the child.

The safe course for parents, as a rule, is to set out early in the school term to cultivate in their children an appreciative attitude toward the teacher. Let us remind our children constantly of the big job the teacher has in understanding and managing so many children day after day.

I wish parents might do more to assure the teacher that we are eager to co-operate with her. Why are we so miserably with commendations of the teacher when we know that she deserves them? Why do we tend to take for granted all the best in her while we are so generous with disapprovals when we suppose that she has erred?

Even if we were wholly selfish in our motives, we could afford to create in our children and throughout the neighborhood more appreciation for the teacher. When, however, we do so, as a matter of justice, graciousness and sportsmanship, we do something fine for our children and ourselves inside.

Splendid Idea

THAT is a good idea set in motion by the Civic Improvement committee of the local chamber of commerce looking to the clearing of spaces along beautiful mountain drives of this county and section in order to permit travelers to observe and enjoy some of the more notable scenic views in which this region abounds.

The action of the State Roads Commission, as well as the hearty support given the movement by U. S. Route 40 Association and the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, in furthering the work comes in for equal commendation. The state roads body, as noted in the news reports, has agreed to look after the clearance work at suitable points of vantage selected by the Western Maryland groups.

The neighboring states of Pennsylvania and West Virginia have given this work more attention than we have in Maryland. In them mountain view spaces have not only been cleared away for sightseers, but pretty parking spaces and other conveniences for tourists have been provided. The clearance work in Western Maryland could be well supplemented in like manner, and it is the purpose of the groups mentioned to carry on to that end.

Those of us who went about in our beautiful outdoors this summer were all too frequently disappointed in being unable to obtain views of scenic splendors at various spots owing to the growth of trees, bushes and undergrowth, which have blotted out the views. It seems a bit strange that we have so long neglected these spots, but it is good to be getting it late than never.

The movement serves as a reminder that we have many opportunities for developing the numerous attractions and facilities for recreation in Western Maryland in addition to providing for better scenic viewing. We should get busy about them, too.

A Constructive Report

THE COMMITTEE ON TAXATION of the National Association of Credit Men has just completed a report based on a survey of the tax experiences and their effects on credit conditions of a representative number of corporations in its membership.

On the basis of the survey the committee has developed a series of conclusions, followed by fifteen recommendations for changes in the federal tax system with the view of correcting certain faults appearing to be most detrimental to sound credit conditions.

One of the findings produced by the report is that the increased tax burden on business is creating a serious situation with implications of danger to the capital position and the credit stability of many American corporations.

Other findings are that the burden of taxation is falling with particular severity upon smaller concerns, and that the complexity of the existing tax structures bring unnecessary delays and costs that hamper business and entail losses.

The report and its fifteen recommendations are constructive and deserve study. Included are such sound suggestions as devising a more adequate method of imposing Social Security taxes, revising the provisions on capital gains and losses, extending the net loss carry-over to at least three years, eliminating tax exemption on future government securities, reducing the high surtaxes, abolishing the capital stock tax, requiring the filing of consolidated tax returns and broadening the tax base correspondingly with abolition of hidden taxes.

These as well as other recommendations given have long been discussed throughout the country and the need of revisions have long been apparent. Something should be done about them, and the recommendations should aid toward that desideratum.

Cancer Clinics

THERE PERSISTS in the minds of many Americans an unreasonable attitude of fear and ignorance concerning that second ranking scourge of mankind, cancer. Even twenty years ago there was some justification for the hopelessness with which both the public and the medical profession regarded this group of diseases; today attention is drawn to the results of two decades of an organized attack on cancer which should evoke the admiration and future co-operation of every citizen. The success of this particular battle against disease depends equally on the alertness and knowledge of the public and the medical profession; on the individual's awareness of the early danger signals of cancer, and on the physician's acumen in early diagnosis and obtaining prompt, effective treatment.

During this twenty-year period of progress, two organizations, one of national and the other of international scope, have exercised a profound influence. The American Society for the Control of Cancer, organized in 1913, has carried into every state the union its program of lay education, its message of "fight cancer with knowledge". In 1930 the American College of Surgeons conducted its first symposium entitled "Cancer is Curable" at its annual clinical congress. Since then the college has collected from its 12,000 fellows in the United States, Canada and other countries, as well as from radiologists and individual hospitals, the records of more than 30,000 five-year cures of cancer.

The American College of Surgeons has just announced its 1939 list of approved cancer clinics in 307 general hospitals and other institutions. This represents the progress in a nine-year program designed to foster the organization of special cancer service in suitably equipped hospitals. Approved cancer clinics represent an effort on the part of the individual institution to develop a nucleus of experienced physicians competent in those special branches of medicine that have to do with the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, and to which the physician may bring his patients for consultation and advice. Probably no other disease requires the united effort and resources of medical men to the same extent as cancer, and the cancer clinic has proved how effectively the general hospital can mobilize its forces.

To some extent a misnomer, "cancer clinics" serve both free and pay patients and deal not only with cancer but are also of service in the detection and eradication of many benign and pre-cancerous conditions. The further establishment of such clinics at strategic points throughout the country holds forth the measure of greatest promise in reducing the toll exacted by cancer.

One war in which this country may well engage its energies is the continued attack on cancer, which is responsible each year for the death of more than three times the number of American soldiers killed in action in the World War. Every citizen can "fight cancer with knowledge". We do know that many cases of cancer are cured with prompt treatment by the proved methods of surgery, x-ray and radium, but we must also abandon the "know-nothing" attitude about the fundamental aspects of cancer.

No epochal discovery has been made concerning the cause of cancer, and considerable doubt exists that any single piece of research will disclose any single cause in a disease which assumes many forms. This is not of the utmost importance, however, for though the cause of diabetes is still unknown it is now a controllable disease through the discovery of insulin. It is important to recognize that in hundreds of laboratories investigators are daily building blocks of knowledge about cancer, and gradually fitting them into the complex mosaic pattern that is gradually coming to light.

The Browser Goes Overboard

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser herewith goes overboard with enthusiasm for a book that costs $10 and is worth twice as much.

It's no novel, either, but Thomas Craven's "Treasury of Art Masterpieces" (Simon & Schuster). A book that, as the old saying goes, should be in every American home. Too many American heads of families would not dream of spending (if they had it) $10 for a book of pictures—even though they ARE the greatest that men have painted. But certainly every library board in the land can afford this book and should buy it!

It's an amazing production, an exciting, stimulating art collection. The Browser has spent many an hour tramping through the galleries, determined to enjoy the masterpieces on their walls . . . and has emerged from them on rare occasions uplifted and overjoyed by the experience—but more often than not bored and bewildered and annoyed, with aching back and crying feet. His journey through the pages of Mr. Craven's gallery—from Giotto to Grant Wood, from Michelangelo to Bellows, from Vermeer and Goya to Gilbert Stuart and Thomas Hart Benton—was a progress of unalloyed delight.

And facing the page on which each of the 144 paintings is reproduced appears an appreciating of the artist and his product by Mr. Craven. Vigorous and provocative, these analyses have the same quality of excitement that is in the paintings themselves. The Browser is happy over the inclusion in the book of six paintings by living Americans—John Sloan, Charles Burchfield, Thomas Hart Benton, John S. Curry, Reginald Marsh and Grant Wood because "they are the leaders (says the editor) of the most exciting and important art movement existing in a troubled world." A judgment with which the Browser, in his own human self, agrees.

Thomas Benton himself speaks for the Browser when he writes of this book: "The beauty it carries overcomes the squalid stink of the moment." General Ared White's "Attack on America" (Houghton Mifflin) is pretty wild stuff and perhaps not intended to be an accurate forecast of future events. The general's purpose obviously is to show what would happen if an ambitious European power seized control in Mexico secretly, built up a strong mechanized army (also in secret), and suddenly attacked an America that had confidently expected time for at least a year's preparation in case of combat.

The product is about what you would expect. American patriots spying in Mexico to learn the extent of the enemy's preparations! Foreign spies working in New York and Washington to undermine us at home! Horrible warfare and defeat for the American forces! Followed by a gathering of the nation's strength to crush the invader! But for many horrid months the enemy held the Southwest and the Pacific Coast in its cruel grip.

Even a noble purpose and flaming love for his country fails to make General White's novel anything but a wooden production. It's quite all right for you to skip it.

BOOKCHATTER: Dr. Richard A. Bermann, Austrian critic and novelist, died one month before publication of his "Home from the Sea", a story of R. L. Stevenson's life in Samoa.

Dr. Sydney Manham in his "Earth's Green Mantle" informs you and the Browser that the bloom on the grape is really a thin covering of wax which protects against too rapid evaporation of the grape's moisture. And the bloom on the peach has the same function.

Hutchins Haggood has written his autobiography, "A Victorian in the Modern World". A gentle and discriminating book.

Ethel Vance's "Escape" is headed for the best seller rungs . . . the story of an actress who escapes from a German execution chamber and of all those who helped her to escape and were changed forever by their experiences.

But what well-known writer wrote this story under a pseudonym? The puzzle is too much for Marsh Maslin.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

War destroys or dulls all that it touches. Already it has interfered with accurate forecasting by the United States Weather Bureau. Before the war we received daily weather reports.

War destroys or dulls all that it touches. Already it has interfered with accurate forecasting by the United States Weather Bureau. Before the war we received daily weather reports. But when men began to march and tanks to roll and guns to shoot, the fighting nations clamped down on such broadcasts because of aid they might give to raiding bombers or enemy submarines. We don't even get weather broadcasts from Canada any more.

Mark Twain once said that people are always talking about the weather but that no one ever does anything about it. It seems much less likely now that anything will be done about it. Many important men have tried to do something about it, not only out-guess it, but control it.

An Australian farm boy was running his father's twine binder under a blazing sun. Burnt, shriveled, meagre stalks of wheat, blasted by drought, were carried up the apron and kicked out in forlorn, disheveled bundles. There wouldn't be yield enough to pay taxes and interest. The lad climbed down from the driver's seat, shook his fist at the sun and marched out into the world to fight the weather—to study it and to circumvent it on various continents and hemispheres "in the heavens above, the earth beneath and the waters under the earth." Weather is still weather, but the lad got a knighthood in the encounter. His name is Sir Hubert Wilkins.

Tremendously Important

In peace or war, weather is tremendously important because of its known effect on human conduct. Professor Huntington of Yale found human energies largely the result of climate. He has back-tracked weather fifteen million years, with astonishing results. Some deep substratum of shale, disclosing a gravel deposit on the bed of a stream, will tell the story of a rainfall which took place before man ever appeared on earth.

Rings on the redwood trees, oldest living things on this planet, record the sunshine and rain of lost years clear back to Cleopatra's day. Certainly the world's economy would be profoundly effective if the weatherman could call his shots fifteen or twenty years ahead. But perhaps, as Buckle wrote, and as the melancholy events of the present day seem to bear out, mankind, with all his migrations, his energies and his culture, remains merely the pawn of the gods that dwell in the clouds and ride the storms.

The war over there also proves that man is a tragic creature. Some destiny compels him to destroy the good and useful things he himself has made by wit and labor and love. The same genius that has conquered most of the terrible diseases, that has produced so many magical things, that has climbed half-way up the slope of Mount Olympus, created also the instruments of man-slaughter which take their daily toll of thousands. The same race that mobilizes scientists all over the world to combat plague, mobilizes other battalions of scientists to devise new ways of destroying its own kind.

Weakening Power Seen

There would be simply no limit to the expansion of man's genius were it not for this disposition to turn upon himself. A great scientist, Dr. L. O. Howard of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, has said that germs and insects will eventually fight it out for the domination of the earth, and that man will be defeated and destroyed because he will have thrown away his chance to win. His intolerances and hatreds and revenges will have weakened his power to conquer creatures invisible to the eye.

Eden Philpotts, English novelist, once wrote a book called "The Forest on the Hill." There is an idyllic description of a placid and beautiful forest on a summer day—sunshine, peace, bird song and a caressing breeze. Then there is a sudden and sinister revelation of the life and

CLAIMING THE CHICKENS AFTER THEY'RE HATCHED

Hitler's Wish for Peace Is Regarded By Embassies As Act of Desperation

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

British and French diplomacy in Washington unquestionably is convinced that Herr Hitler realizes that he has "bitten off more than he can chew."

Which is why he is evidently so desperately anxious to have peace arranged for him.

To be sure, he wants peace on his own terms—meaning, in effect, a victorious peace for Germany.

Nevertheless, the opinion expressed that he's prepared to make some few concessions rather than fight to a finish.

True, this judgment, as previously remarked, is Allied diplomacy's judgment, and maybe it's colored by a certain amount of dishful thinking. You by no means get the same reaction from talks with German representatives in our capital; you wouldn't expect to. At all events, you wouldn't expect them to be making any such admission.

Still, you do hear the most fervent peace talk at Adolf's embassy. To listen to it you'd conclude that the Nazis are regular Quakers.

And he concludes with these words: "America can, and I believe will, lead the world back to sanity by putting its own house in order and keeping it safe."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Various neutral embassies and legations (Scandinavia's, the Balkans', Belgium's, Holland's, Switzerland's and Italy's) also hint that they believe the Fuehrer to be plenty nervous.

Our state department, strictly sub rosa, has the same notion.

Of course all these foreign outfits get their dope from their respective home governments, which, in turn, get it by pipeline out of Germany and possibly supplement it with a bit of hopeful guessing. Therefore, it hard to tell just how reliable it is. However, there's a good deal of unanimity about it. Moreover, it's borne out by Americans recently from the Fatherland—though they clutched a parade, a bonfire, a pie-eating contest and a dance.

And so it goes. There's just as much energy used, just as much noise made, and just as many spooks haunting the streets, but no one gets hurt, the front gate is safe, and everybody has a lot of fun.

Maybe So, Maybe Not

I don't say that all this is so. I say only that it's Washington's diplomatic chatter.

It likewise is to the purport that Adolf senses his danger and literally is crazy to make peace before he's overthrown—or worse.

The Germans always have maintained that the Allies didn't lick them in the last war; that internal revolution was what defeated them. There's considerable plausibility about this version.

Well, if the historically entrenched Kaiser could be revolted out of office that time, why can't the accidental Fuehrer be revolted out still more easily? Not if he can win a "lightning war," indeed, but this looks like stringing out indefinitely. What diplomatic observers argue, is that makes him so abnormally pacifistic.

On the Record

By Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University

The money spent by all nations for the destructive purposes of the World War amounted to $400,000,000,000.

Do you know what we could have done with that money if we had used it constructively?

We could have built a $250,000,000 house, furnished it with $100,000,000 of furniture, placed it in the middle of 5 acres of land worth $100 an acre, and given this estate outright to every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

We could have given to each city of 20,000 inhabitants or over in each country named, a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university.

Out of what was left we could have set aside a sum at 5 per cent that would provide a $1,000,000-a-year salary for an army of 125,000 nurses and another army of 125,000 teachers.

Chest Plan Has Many Advantages

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 20.—The community chest drive—the 1939 "Mobilization for Human Needs"—is a call for the most intelligent and scientific giving ever invented in this or any other country.

Methods vary slightly in different cities and towns but in general the idea is to create, once every twelve months, a war chest in each community for the whole year. It asks everybody who has voluntarily to contribute throughout the year to help those who have not. No one has to make this contribution in a lump. Anybody can pledge to pay what he can afford in twelve installments.

The money is spent by no czar of charity. It is disbursed through trained local organizations, educated in the use of such money to make it go farthest and cover the greatest area of need. They are far more familiar by daily sympathetic contact with where the need is most, than any individual, or any governmental or other outside agency, could possibly be.

Double Service

It thus serves a double basis. It prevents constant solicitation and pressure by groups in respect of some of which the giver cannot possibly know of their relative necessity or efficiency. He is solicited and pledges himself once. He gives all he can afford throughout the year. He gives where he can be certain that his gift will do more good, more justly, than any other place.

The "take" of professional parish-beggars, especially among the street beggars of our great cities, is unknown. It is very great. No body likes to resist an appeal for bread, but this kind of solicitation is frequently a racket and has been so for thousands of years. The old Mother Goose rhyme said more than appears on the first reading: "Hark, hark the dogs do bark! The beggars are coming to town. Some in rags and some in tags—and some in velvet gowns." There are plenty of this ilk who have made fortunes.

One of Many

This is only one of many abuses of careless giving that the community chest method avoids. The more careful giver who seeks to make his own inquiries about need is scarcely more efficient. He can know relative need as trained organizations know them. He has time to find out or to follow up. Even the good Samaritan on the road to Jericho didn't attempt to administer his own gift. He let whoever he could afford with the keeper and pledged himself to provide more if that should prove necessary. That is an excellent Biblical precept in Christian charity for the community chest method.

Recent methods of government relief through taxation have helped spontaneous human giving. It is a fashion to say: "The Government takes more than I can afford by taxes and gives it to the needy. Why should I give more?"

There are several answers to that, some idealistic, some very hard boiled and practical. In the first place, charity by compulsion never warmed any human heart, either of givers or takers. Second, government relief is the most expensive and extravagant on earth. Third, if communities don't attend to their own needs freely and economically, government will do for them and at their expense, forcibly and extravagantly. Fourth, as government comes in, local dependence goes out.

Splendid Idea

THAT is a good idea set in motion by the Civic Improvement committee of the local chamber of commerce looking to the clearing of spaces along beautiful mountain drives of this county and section in order to permit travelers to observe and enjoy some of the more notable scenic views in which this region abounds.

The action of the State Roads Commission, as well as the hearty support given the movement by U. S. Route 40 Association and the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, in furthering the work comes in for equal commendation. The state roads body, as noted in the news reports, has agreed to look after the clearance work at suitable points of vantage selected by the Western Maryland groups.

The neighboring states of Pennsylvania and West Virginia have given this work more attention than we have in Maryland. In them mountain view spaces have not only been cleared away for sightseers, but pretty parking spaces and other conveniences for tourists have been provided. The clearance work in Western Maryland could be well supplemented in like manner, and it is the purpose of the groups mentioned to carry on to that end.

Those of us who went about in our beautiful outdoors this summer were all too frequently disappointed in being unable to obtain views of scenic splendors at various spots owing to the growth of trees, bushes and undergrowth, which have blotted out the views. It seems a bit strange that we have so long neglected these spots, but it is not to be getting at it late than never.

The movement serves as a reminder that we have many opportunities for developing the numerous attractions and facilities for recreation in Western Maryland in addition to providing for better scenic viewing. We should get busy about them, too.

A Constructive Report

THE COMMITTEE ON TAXATION of the National Association of Credit Men has just completed a report based on a survey of the tax experiences and their effects on credit conditions of a representative number of corporations in its membership.

On the basis of the survey the committee has developed a series of conclusions, followed by fifteen recommendations for changes in the federal tax system with the view of correcting certain faults appearing to be most detrimental to sound credit conditions.

One of the findings produced by the report is that the increased tax burden on business is creating a serious situation with implications of danger to the capital position and the credit stability of many American corporations.

Other findings are that the burden of taxation is falling with particular severity upon smaller concerns, and that the complexity of the existing tax structures bring unnecessary delays and costs that hamper business and entail losses.

The report and its fifteen recommendations are constructive and deserve study. Included are such sound suggestions as devising a more adequate method of imposing Social Security taxes, revising the provisions on capital gains and losses, extending the net loss carry-over to at least three years, eliminating tax exemption on future government securities, reducing the high surtaxes, abolishing the capital stock tax, requiring the filing of consolidated tax returns and broadening the tax base correspondingly with abolition of hidden taxes.

These as well as other recommendations given have long been discussed throughout the country and the need of revisions have long been apparent. Something should be done about them, and the recommendations should aid toward that desideratum.

Cancer Clinics

THERE PERSISTS in the minds of many Americans an unreasonable attitude of fear and ignorance concerning that second ranking scourge of mankind, cancer. Even twenty years ago there was some justification for the hopelessness with which both the public and the medical profession regarded this group of diseases; today attention is drawn to the results of two decades of an organized attack on cancer which should evoke the admiration and future co-operation of every citizen. The success of this particular battle against disease depends equally on the alertness and knowledge of the public and the medical profession; on the individual's awareness of the early danger signals of cancer, and on the physician's acumen in early diagnosis and obtaining prompt, effective treatment.

During this twenty-year period of progress, two organizations, one of national and the other of international scope, have exercised a profound influence. The American Society for the Control of Cancer, organized in 1913, has carried into every state the union of its program of lay education, its message of "fight cancer with knowledge". In 1930 the American College of Surgeons conducted its first symposium entitled "Cancer is Curable" at its annual clinical congress. Since then the college has collected from its 12,000 fellows in the United States, Canada and other countries, as well as from radiologists and individual hospitals, the records of more than 30,000 five-year cures of cancer.

The American College of Surgeons has just announced its 1939 list of approved cancer clinics in 307 general hospitals and other institutions. This represents the progress in a nine-year program designed to foster the organization of special cancer service in suitably equipped hospitals. Approved cancer clinics represent an effort on the part of the individual institution to develop a nucleus of experienced physicians competent in those special branches of medicine that have to do with the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, and to which the physician may bring his patients for consultation and advice. Probably no other disease requires the united effort and resources of medical men to the same extent as cancer, and the cancer clinic has proved how effectively the general hospital can mobilize its forces.

To some extent a misnomer, "cancer clinics" serve both free and pay patients and deal not only with cancer but are also of service in the detection and eradication of many benign and pre-cancerous conditions. The further establishment of such clinics at strategic points throughout the country holds forth the measure of greatest promise in reducing the toll exacted by cancer.

One war in which this country may well engage its energies is the continued attack on cancer, which is responsible each year for the death of more than three times the number of American soldiers killed in action in the World War. Every citizen can "fight cancer with knowledge", many can support an increased program in cancer research, for which available funds each year are far less than the cost of a submarine. We do know that many cases of cancer are cured with prompt treatment by the proved methods of surgery, x-ray and radium, but we must also abandon the "know-nothing" attitude about the fundamental aspects of cancer.

No epochal discovery has been made concerning the cause of cancer, and considerable doubt exists that any single piece of research will disclose any single cause in a disease which assumes many forms. This is not of the utmost importance, however, for though the cause of diabetes is still unknown it is now a controllable disease through the discovery of insulin. It is important to recognize that in hundreds of laboratories investigators are daily building blocks of knowledge about cancer, and gradually fitting them into the complex mosaic pattern that is gradually coming to light.

The Brower Goes Overboard

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Brower herewith goes overboard with enthusiasm for a book that costs $10 and is worth twice as much. It's no novel, either, but Thomas Craven's "Treasury of Art Masterpieces" (Simon & Schuster).

A book that, as the old saying goes, should be in every American home. Too many American heads of families would not dream of spending $10 for a book of pictures—even though they ARE the greatest that men have painted. But certainly every library board in the land can afford this book and should buy it!

It's an amazing production, an exciting, stimulating art collection. The Brower has spent many an hour tramping through art galleries, determined to enjoy the masterpieces on their walls, and has emerged from them on rare occasions uplifted and overjoyed by the experience—but more often than not bored and bewildered and annoyed with aching back and crying feet.

His journey through the pages of Craven's gallery—from Giotto to Grant Wood, from Michelangelo to Bellows, from Vermeer and Goya to Gilbert Stuart and Thomas Hart Benton—was a progress of unalloyed delight.

And facing the page on which each of the 144 paintings is reproduced appears an appreciating of the artist and his product by Mr. Craven. Vigorous and provocative these analyses have the same quality of excitement that is in the paintings themselves.

The Brower is happy over the inclusion in the book of six paintings by living Americans—John Sloan, Charles Burchfield, Thomas Hart Benton, John S. Curry, Reginald Marsh and Grant Wood because "they are the leaders (says the editor) of the most exciting and important art movement existing in a troubled world." A judgment with which the Brower, in his own human self, agrees. Thomas Benton himself speaks for the Brower when he writes of this book: "The beauty it carries overcomes the squalid stink of the moment."

General Ared White's "Attack on America" (Houghton Mifflin) is pretty well stuff and perhaps not intended to be an accurate forecast of future events. The general's purpose obviously is to show what would happen if an ambitious European power seized control in Mexico secretly, built up a strong mechanized army (also in secret), and suddenly attacked an America that had confidently expected time for at least a year's preparation in case of combat.

The product is about what you would expect.

American patriots spying in Mexico to learn the extent of the enemy's preparations? Foreign spies working in New York and Washington to undermine us at home? Horrible warfare and defeat for the American forces? Followed by a gathering of the nation's strength to crush the invader? But for many horrid months the enemy held the Southwest and the Pacific Coast in its cruel grip.

Even a noble purpose and flaming love for his country fails to make General White's novel anything but a wooden production. It's quite all right for you to skip it.

BOOKCHATTER: Dr. Richard A. Bernmann, Austrian critic and novelist, died one month before publication of his "Home from the Sea," a story of R. L. Stevenson's life in Samoa.

Dr. Sydney Manham in his "Earth's Green Mantle" informs you and the Brower that the bloom on the grape is really a thin covering of wax which protects against too rapid evaporation of the grape's moisture. And the bloom on the peach has the same function.

Hutchins Hapgood has written his autobiography, "A Victorian in the Modern World." A gentle and discriminating book.

Ethel Vance's "Escape" is headed for the best seller rungs—the story of an actress who escapes from a German execution chamber and of all those who helped her to escape and were changed forever by their experiences.

But what well-known writer wrote this story under a pseudonym? The puzzle is too much for Marshall Maslin.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

War destroys or dulls all that it touches. Already it has interfered with accurate forecasting by the United States Weather Bureau. Before the war we received daily weather reports, broadcast from all western Europe. But when men began to march and tanks to roll and guns to shoot, the fighting nations clamped down on such broadcasts because of aid they might give to raiding bombers or enemy submarines. We even get weather broadcasts from Canada any more.

Mark Twain once said that people are always talking about the weather but that no one ever does anything about it. It seems much less likely now that anything will be done about it. Many important men have tried to do something about it, not only out-guess it, but control it. An Australian farm boy was running his father's wine binder under a blazing sun. Burnt, shriveled, meagre stalks of wheat, blasted by drought, were carried up the apron and kicked out in forlorn, disheveled bundles. There wouldn't be yield enough to pay taxes and interest. The lad climbed down from the driver's seat, shook his fist at the sun and marched out into the world to fight the weather—to study it and to circumvent it on various continents and hemispheres "in the heavens above, the earth beneath and the waters under the earth." Weather is still weather, but the lad got a knighthood in the encounter. His name is Sir Hubert Wilkins.

Tremendously Important

In peace or war, weather is tremendously important because of its known effect on human conduct. Professor Huntington of Yale found human energies largely the result of climate. He has back-tracked weather fifteen million years, with astonishing results. Some deep substratum of shale, disclosing a gravel deposit on the bed of a stream, will tell the story of a rainfall which took place before man ever appeared on earth.

Rings on the redwood trees, oldest living things on this planet, record the sunshine and rain of lost years clear back to Cleopatra's day. Certainly the world's economy would be profoundly effective if the weatherman could call his shots fifteen or twenty years ahead. But perhaps, as Buckle wrote, and as the melancholy events of the present day seem to bear out, mankind, with all his migrations, his energies and his culture, remains merely the pawn of the gods that dwell in the clouds and ride the storms.

The war over there also proves that man is a tragic creature. Some destiny compels him to destroy the good and useful things he himself has made by wit and labor and love. The same genius that has conquered most of the terrible diseases, that has produced so many magical things, that has climbed half-way up the slope of Mount Olympus, created also the instruments of man's slaughter which take their daily toll of thousands. The same race that mobilizes scientists all over the world to combat plague, mobilizes other battalions of scientists to devise new ways of destroying its own kind.

Weakening Power Seen

There would be simply no limit to the expansion of man's genius were it not for this disposition to turn upon himself. A great scientist, Dr. L. O. Howard of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, has said that germs and insects will eventually fight it out for the domination of the earth, and that man will be defeated and destroyed because he will have thrown away his chance to win. His intolerances and hatreds and revenges will have weakened his power to conquer creatures invisible to the eye.

Eden Philpotts, English novelist, once wrote a book called "The Forest on the Hill." There is an idyllic description of a placid and beautiful forest on a summer day—sunshine, breeze, bird song and a caressing breeze. Then there is a sudden and sinister revelation of the life and

Hitler's Wish for Peace Is Regarded By Embassies As Act of Desperation

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

British and French diplomacy in Washington unquestionably is convinced that Herr Hitler realizes that he has "bitten off more than he can chew" — which is why he is so desperately anxious to have peace arranged for him.

Charles P. Stewart

He's prepared to make some concessions rather than fight to a finish.

True, this judgment, as previously remarked, is Allied diplomacy's judgment, and maybe its colored by a certain amount of selfish thinking. You by no means get the same reaction from talks with German representatives in our capital; you wouldn't expect to. At all events, you wouldn't expect them to be making any such admission. Still, you do hear the most fervent peace talk at Adolf's embassy. To listen to it you'd conclude that the Nazis are regular Quakers.

Plenty Nervous

Various neutral embassies and legations (Scandinavia's, the Balkans', Belgium's, Holland's, Switzerland's and Italy's) also hint that they believe the Fuehrer to be plenty nervous.

Our state department, strictly sub rosa, has the same notion.

Of course all these foreign outfits get their dope from their respective home governments, which, in turn, get it by pipeline out of Germany and possibly supplement it with a bit of hopeful guessing. Therefore, it hard to tell just how reliable it is. However, there's a good deal of unanimity about it. Moreover, it's borne out by Americans recently from the Fatherland—though they clashes a parade, a bonfire, a pie-eating contest and a dance.

And so it goes. There's just as much energy used, just as much noise made, and just as many spoons haunting the streets, but no one gets hurt, the front gate is safe, and everybody has a lot of fun.

On the Record

By Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University

The money spent by all nations for the destructive purposes of the World War amounted to $400,000,000,000.

Do you know what we could have done with that money if we had used it constructively?

We could have built a $2,500 house, furnished with $1,000 worth of furniture, placed it in the middle of 5 acres of land worth $100 an acre, and given this estate outright to every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

We could have given to each city of 20,000 inhabitants or over, in each country named, a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university.

Out of what was left we could have set aside a sum of 5 per cent that would provide a $1,000,000-a-year salary for an army of 125,000 nurses and another army of 125,000 teachers.

Chest Plan Has Many Advantages

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 20.—The community chest drive—the 1939 "Mobilization for Human Needs"—is a call for the most intelligent and scientific giving ever invented in this or any other country.

Methods vary slightly in different cities and towns but in general the idea is to create, once every twelve months, a "war chest" in each community for the whole year. It asks everybody who has, voluntarily to contribute throughout the year to help those who have not. No one has to make this contribution in a lump. Anybody can pledge to pay what he can afford in twelve installments.

The money is spent by no charity of itself. It is disbursed through trained local organizations, educated in the use of such money to make it go farthest and cover the greatest area of need. They are far more familiar by daily sympathetic contact with where the need is most, than any individual or any governmental or other outside agency, could possibly be.

Double Service

It thus serves a double basis. It prevents constant solicitation and pressure by groups in respect of some of which the giver cannot possibly know of their relative necessity or efficiency. He is solicited and pledges himself once. He gives all he can afford throughout the year. He gives where he can be certain that his gift will do more good, more justly, than any other place.

The "take" of professional handlers, especially among the street beggars of our great cities, is unknown. It is very great. Nobody likes to resist an appeal for bread, but this kind of solicitation is frequently a racket and has been so for thousands of years. The old Mother Goose rhyme said more than appears on the first reading: "Hark! hark the dogs do bark! The beggars are coming to town. Some in rags and some in tags—and some in velvet gowns." There are plenty of this ilk who have made fortunes.

One of Many

This is only one of many abuses of careless giving that the community chest method avoids. The more careful giver who seeks to make his own inquiries about need is scarcely more efficient. He can know relative need as trained organizations know them. He has time to find out or to follow up. Even the good samaritan on the road to Jericho didn't attempt to administer his own gift. He let the keeper and pledged himself to provide more if that should prove necessary. That is an excellent Biblical precept in Christian charity for the community chest method.

Recent methods of government relief through taxation have helped spontaneous human giving. It is a fashion to say: "The Government takes more than I can afford by taxes and gives it to the needy. Why should I give more?"

There are several answers to that, some idealistic, some very hard boiled and practical. In the first place, charity by compulsion never warmed any human heart, either of givers or takers. Second, government relief is the most expensive and extravagant on earth. Third, if communities don't attend to their own needs freely and economically, government will do so for them and at their expense. Fourth, as government comes in, local dependence goes out.

Losing Their Independence

To the precise extent that communities neglect their own local duties and leave it to Washington, they are neglecting their own independence and losing the precious right of local self-government. Washington, if the people of our States and cities could have taken care of their own during our terrible years of depression, the economic crochets of federal debt, taxes and regulation would have been near where near as heavy as they are now. This scientific, democratic, intelligent and distinctively American national effort is now going on over the United States. It is one of the most important movements that is going on at home, far more important to us than the dread news from Europe. It is our first line of our home front.—Distribution by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Cotton no longer is king in Texas. The 1938 cotton production was valued at $129,688,000, while the state's oil production was valued at $532,000,000.

Morning Motto

Let the soldier be abroad if he will, he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage—a personage less imposing in the eyes of some, perhaps insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full military array.—LORD BROUGHAM.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

I LOOKED at Neal's distorted face in astonishment. Last night it was calm though sad and worn. What could have happened at this early hour to put him into such a rage? I glanced back at the bed. Josie was still asleep. Silently I slipped into my clothes and went quietly down the stairs.

The shades were raised in the lounge, the ashes removed from the fireplace and a new fire laid ready for lighting. I knew Chloe's deft hand must be already at work.

In the kitchen she greeted me with a smiling "Good morning," though I could see a sorrowful light in the depth of her limpid brown eyes. I had intended going out to Tinker's run, but if I were to attempt to take Mrs. Peake's place for even a few days, I must attend to business.

I made a quick decision. It wasn't any use my trying to bluff Chloe into believing I knew anything about running an inn. I didn't and she knew it, or if she didn't know it now, she would the first time I gave an order—and it the wrong one.

Perhaps if I took her into my confidence we could work together until Josie was able to take the reins. I knew Chloe was loyal and trustworthy. The way she acted last night proved that. I dropped down on a chair beside the table where she was working and began:

"Chloe, I don't know one thing about running this house, but Miss Josie's asked me to help out and I'm going to do it. If you'll help me, tell me the things I should do and how to do them if I don't know how, it'll mean extra money in your pocket when I'm done." I looked meaningfully at her as I spoke.

A faint smile crinkled the warm brown flesh around her eyes. She stopped her rhythmic beating of batter in the big blue bowl, laid her shapely hands, palm down, on the table, and leaned toward me. An amused note sounded in her rich mellow voice.

"You don't have to tell me that. I know it without telling. How should a city lady like you know anything about running a place like this? It ain't hard. I could do it. I've run things for Miss Peake for days at a time when she had to be away. I could do it now. But it's better if there's a white hand on the rudder. Everybody knows that. I'll tell you the things to do today and tomorrow you'll know for yourself. As for extra pay—" She held herself a trifle straighter, a note of dignity came into her voice. "I'm a poor woman, Miss Gordon. If I want, I'd be home with my children right now. If what I do is worth a little money you see fit to give it to me, I'll be grateful. But—" Her voice rang with a flute-like note—"you don't have to PAY me for helpin' out in time o' trouble."

I reached out and took one of her strong capable hands in a tight clasp. "You're a peach, Chloe," I said. "I wasn't one bit ashamed that a husky note came into my voice. Chloe's simple self-respecting loyalty would be a lesson to anyone. We'll get along fine together. What did Mrs. Peake do at this hour?"

Chloe laughed, a low gurgle of pure enjoyment. "The first thin' she did every mornin' was to go out an' get a breath of air. An' I 'spect that's the best thin' for you to do, too."

"Then I will, Chloe, and when I come back we'll put our heads together."

"After breakfast," Miss Gordon. Miss Peake always said she could do anything if she started her day with a breath of air an' a good breakfast. It'll be ready when you come back."

I went out the kitchen door and looked over at Tinker's run. I had been so long with Chloe I expected to find Neal gone. But he was still walking around, closely scrutinizing the ground.

"Good morning, Neal," at my voice Tinker came to the wire and thrust his nose, with a throaty whine, against the meshes. I rubbed his velvety muzzle with gentle fingers. I like Tinker, but right then my attention was more for his master.

Neal's reply to my salutation was a cordial one and, after another keen glance around, he came over to me.

"Look, Sally. A hard metallic note came into his voice. "I just picked these up in here." He opened his hand and I saw five pieces of meat. They were dark and discolored by some saline-like substance which was smeared on them.

"What is the matter with them, Neal? Didn't he like his food last night?"

"His food!" Neal gave a hard, bitter laugh. "This isn't his food. Somebody tried to poison him."

Poison again! My brain was in a pinwheel whirl. "Don't you think you ought to tell Captain Lancy?" I stammered.

"I'm going to do so," Neal answered emphatically. "Here he comes now." He raised his voice a trifle. "Good morning, Captain Lancy. Will you come here, please?"

Lancy, who looked as fresh as though he had slept through long peaceful hours, came smilingly toward us. But his smile quickly faded when Neal showed him the meat and told him where he had found it.

"I don't like it," he said softly, as if to himself. "I don't like it." He walked around the outside of the run, closely scanning the ground, as Neal had done on the inside. Neal and I watched him. One place seemed of particular interest. He walked here and there, but invariably came back to that one spot.

"Come here," he said at last. "Don't come any closer," he cautioned as we approached. "Do you see those footprints? A woman's, undoubtedly. Would they fit your shoes, Miss Gordon?"

Without a word I unlaced one of the tan oxfords I was wearing, slipped it off and handed it to the detective.

"This shoe is much larger," he said after comparison. "Would you be clever enough to borrow another woman's shoes if you intended to throw poison into this run, Miss Gordon?"

I considered the question from every angle. I knew Lancy had a reason for asking it, and I was willing to give my best thought to the answer. My eyes, which had followed Lancy as he wandered here and there, had noted one thing. The thick velvety grass of the rear lawn came close up to the base of the run. As far as I could see, there was just one place where a footprint would show. It was too much to believe that the would-be poisoner had accidentally stepped on the one place suitable for preserving his prints.

"I don't think so," I said. "The grass is too thick except in that one spot to show footprints. No, I don't think I would borrow anyone's shoes. I'd just be careful where I stepped and trust to luck."

"But if you did borrow shoes, from whom would you obtain them?" he insisted.

"Pauline Rutherford's and Coral Easton's are too small for me. I know that by just looking," I replied. "I think Josie's are larger than mine, and I know Rhoda's are. I don't know about Mrs. Rutherford's and Mrs. Peake's."

"Hu-um! Then, if you are correct, we may suppose that this print was made by Miss Easton or Miss Rutherford," he mused.

"Coral had on high heels last night," Neal volunteered. "I noticed them because all the rest of you girls had on flat heels with your slacks."

"She would be different," I muttered under my breath. Lancy gave me a sharp glance.

"Is that correct?" he barked.

"It's correct enough," I flung back as curtly as he had spoken. "But just how long do you think it takes to change a pair of shoes?"

I caught an approving twinkle in the glance Lancy shot at me. I think he doesn't like Coral Easton any better than I do.

"What in the world is all the fuss about?" demanded a peevish voice.

We swung on our heels. Coral, in smart linen dress, stood looking at us. Involuntarily we all glanced down at her shoes. The daintiest of white gabardine sandals were on her feet. But three-inch high heels were never made to wear on Cape Cod in the morning. I had noticed before that something in Coral's costumes always strikes a wrong note.

While I was busy with my thoughts I heard Neal telling her, briefly, of the poisoned meat he found, but if he expected any sympathy from her he failed to receive it.

"Coral!" Indignation, hurt and surprise were in his voice.

"I mean it. I don't like that brute. If you think I'm going to have him around, you're mistaken." Her voice was hard, with a sneering, domineering note I had not heard before.

Covertly watching Neal's face, I saw it harden with determination while a light of suspicion grew in his eyes. I think it was the beginning of the end of his infatuation.

"Where I am, Tinker will be," He turned on his heel as he spoke, leaving Coral staring after him, cupidity and surprise imprinted on her face.

The shades were raised in the lounge, the ashes removed from the fireplace and a new fire laid ready for lighting. I knew Chloe's deft hand must be already at work.

In the kitchen she greeted me with a smiling "Good morning," though I could see a sorrowful light in the depth of her limpid brown eyes. I had intended going out to Tinker's run, but if I were to attempt to take Mrs. Peake's place for even a few days, I must attend to business.

I made a quick decision. It wasn't any use my trying to bluff Chloe into believing I knew anything about running an inn. I didn't and she knew it, or if she didn't know it now, she would the first time I gave an order and—it was the wrong one.

Perhaps if I took her into my confidence we could work together until Josie was able to take the reins. I knew Chloe was loyal and trustworthy. The way she acted last night proved that. I dropped down on a chair beside the table where she was working and began:

"Chloe, I don't know one thing about running this house, but Miss Josie's asked me to help out and I'm going to do it. If you'll help me, tell me the things I should do and how to do them if I don't know now, it'll mean extra money in your pocket when I'm done." I looked meaningfully at her as I spoke.

A faint smile crinkled the warm brown flesh around her eyes. She stopped her rhythmic beating of batter in the big blue bowl, laid her shapely hands, palm down, on the table, and leaned toward me. An amused note sounded in her rich melodic voice.

"You don't have to tell me that. I know it without telling. How should a city lady like you know anything 'bout running a place like this? It ain't hard, I could do it. I've run things for Miss Peake, and I can run 'em when she had to be away. I could do it now. But it's better if there's a white hand on the rudder. Everybody knows that. I'll tell you the things to do today and tomorrow you'll know 'em by yourself. As for extra pay—" She held herself a trifle straighter, a note of dignity came into her voice. "I'm a poor woman, Miss Gordon. If I want to be home with my children right now, if what I do is worth a little more an' you see fit to give it to me, I'll be grateful. But—" Her voice rang with a flute-like note—"you don't have to PAY me to helpin' out in time o' trouble."

I reached out and took one of her strong capable hands in a tight clasp. "You're a peach, Chloe. I said I wasn't one bit ashamed that a husky note came into my voice. Chloe's simple self-respecting loyalty would be a lesson to anyone. 'Well, get along fine together. What did Mrs. Peake do at this hour?'"

Chloe laughed, a low gurgle of pure enjoyment. "The first thin' she did every mornin' was to go out an' get a breath of air. An' I 'sp'ed that's the best thin' for you to do, too."

"Then I will, Chloe, and when I come back we'll put our heads together."

"After breakfast," Miss Gordon. Miss Peake always said she could do anything if she started her day with a breath of air an' a good breakfast. It'll be ready when you come back."

I went out the kitchen door and looked over at Tinker's run. I had been so long with Chloe I expected to find Neal gone. But he was still walking around, closely scrutinizing the ground.

"Good morning, Neal." At my voice Tinker came to the wire and thrust his nose, with a throaty whine, against the mesh. I rubbed his velvety muzzle with gentle fingers. I like Tinker, but right then my attention was more for his master.

Neal's reply to my salutation was a cordial one and, after another keen glance around, he came over to me.

"Look, Sally." A hard metallic note came into his voice. "I just picked these up in here." He opened his hand and I saw five pieces of meat. They were dark and discolored by some saline-like substance which was smeared on them.

"What is the matter with them, Neal? Didn't he like his food last night?"

"His food!" Neal gave a hard, bitter laugh. "This isn't his food. Somebody tried to poison him."

Poison again! My brain was in a pinwheel whirl. "D-don't you think you ought to tell Captain Lancy?" I stammered.

"I'm going to do so," Neal answered emphatically. "Here he comes now." He raised his voice a trifle. "Good morning, Captain Lancy. Will you come here, please?"

Lancy, who looked as fresh as though he had slept through long peaceful hours, came smilingly to the door. He walked here and there, but invariably came back to that one spot.

"Come here," he said at last. "Don't come any closer," he cautioned as we approached. "Do you see those footprints? A woman's, undoubtedly. Would they fit your shoes, Miss Gordon?"

Without a word I unlaced one of the tan oxfords I was wearing, slipped it off and handed it to the detective.

"This shoe is much larger," he said after comparison. "Would you be clever enough to borrow another woman's shoes if you intended to throw poison into this run, Miss Gordon?"

I considered the question from every angle. I knew Lancy had a reason for asking it, and I was willing to give my best thought to the answer. My eyes, which had followed Lancy as he wandered here and there, had noted one thing. The thick velvety grass of the rear lawn came close up to the base of the run. As far as I could see, there was just one place where a footprint would show. It was too much to believe that the would-be poisoner had accidentally stepped on the one place suitable for preserving his prints.

"I don't think so," I said. "The grass is too thick except in that one spot to show footprints. No, I don't think I would borrow anyone's shoes. I'd just be careful where I stepped and trust to luck."

"But if you did borrow shoes, from whom would you obtain them?" he insisted.

"Pauline Rutherford's and Coral Easton's are too small for me. I replied, "I think Josie's are larger than mine, and I know Rhoda's are. I don't know about Mrs. Rutherford's and Mrs. Peake's."

"Hu-um! Then, if you are correct, we may suppose that this print was made by Miss Easton or Miss Rutherford," he mused.

"Coral had on high heels last night," Neal volunteered. "I noticed them because all the rest of you girls had on flat heels with your slacks."

"She would be different," I muttered under my breath. Lancy gave me a sharp glance.

"Is that correct?" he barked.

"It's correct enough," I flung back as curtly as he had spoken. "But just how long do you think it takes to change a pair of shoes?"

I caught an approving twinkle in the glance Lancy shot at me. I think he doesn't like Coral Easton any better than I do.

"What in the world is all the fuss about?" demanded a peevish voice.

We swung on our heels. Coral, in smart linen dress, stood looking at us. Involuntarily, we all glanced down at her shoes. The daintiest of white gahardine sandals were on her feet. But three-inch high heels were never made to wear on Cape Cod in the morning. I had noticed before that something in Coral's costume always strikes a wrong note.

While I was busy with my thoughts I heard Neal telling her briefly, of the poisoned meat he found, but if he expected any sympathy from her he failed to receive it.

She shrugged her shoulders. "It's too bad he didn't eat it," she calmly said.

"Coral!" Indignation, hurt and surprise were in his voice.

"I mean it. I don't like that brute. If you think I'm going to have him around, you're mistaken." Her voice was hard, with a sneering, domineering note I had not heard before.

Covertly watching Neal's face, I saw it harden with determination while a light of suspicion grew in his eyes. I think it was the beginning of the end of his infatuation.

"He turned on his heel as he spoke, leaving Coral staring after him, cupidity and surprise imprinted on her face."

You've Got To Have a Crust
If You Want Pie-Making FameLOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

A bangup pie still is among the best of American desserts. And if you are one of those cooks who make good pie crusts, you have usually conquered the problem of pie-making. In fact, in some communities a cook is known by the crust she makes.

Successful crust-making depends somewhat on the cook's judgment, but here are some hints that should help you develop that judgment.

The basic rule is: Use one-third as much fat as flour. For one-crust pie of moderate size put 1 cup of flour (sifted, of course, before measuring) into a bowl and add 1-2 teaspoon of salt. With 2 knives or a pastry mixer, cut in 1-3 cup of cold fat. Cut until the flour-coated fat particles are about the size of a small pea. That's enough; overmixing will not make your crust any flakier.

Now, slowly pour in iced water, using lightly with a fork until the dough holds together. Here's a place where judgment plays a part. The amount of water cannot be determined; some flours are more than others. But remember this: Too much water will make a tough crust, too little water will make a crumbly crust. Press the dough into a ball, then chill it; cold dough rolls out more easily than warm dough.

When you're ready to make your pie dust the table or rolling board lightly with flour, and roll the dough to fit the pie pan. Roll out only once—never work over the crust or it will be tough. Carefully lift the crust into the pan and press it well down into the corners; that's very important. Trim off the excess crust or fold it under and flute the edges with the fingers. Prick sides, rim and bottom of the crust with a fork to keep it from blistering during baking.

For a crust you're going to bake separately to hold a cooked filling like lemon cream or chocolate—bake in a hot oven, about 400 degrees, for 10 minutes, or until the crust is well browned and has shrunk slightly from the edges of the pan.

If you're planning a moderate-sized double-crust pie, use 1 1/2 cups of flour. For a larger two-crust pie (to serve 6) you will need 2 cups of flour. Increase the other ingredients in proportion.

The double-crust pie must be sealed. Moisten the lower crust with a little water or milk and then adjust the upper crust and pinch the edges together. Slit the top crust before putting it in place. This lets steam escape during the baking.

For a cheese crust—delicious with apple, lemon or berry filling—add 1-2 cup grated cheese to the fat and flour, reducing the amount of fat from 1-3 to 1-4 cupful. Nut pastry, too, is something new

A Luscious Karmel Apple Cake

Now that apple time has come again, treat the family to this spicy apple cake. It's light and tender—mostly delicious—and its caramel frosting is smooth as the creamiest fudge!

Men and children love karmel apple cake, and when you entertain your guests will beg you for this recipe!

Here's a novel dessert—easy to make and inexpensive. You just whisk the batter together with your triple-cream Spry and this pure, bland vegetable shortening lets the spicy apple flavor come through to best advantage. Don't forget, it costs less, too.

Some time when you are in a great hurry, use these spicy apple layers unfrosted. They're simply luscious served in wedges, with hot lemon sauce poured over.

Cut out this inexpensive recipe now. You'll want to use it often during the fall and winter days, while apples are plenty and low-priced.

Blend shortening, salt and spices. Add sugar gradually and cream well. Add eggs singly, beating well after each addition. Add apples and mix well. Sift baking powder and soda

Karmel Apple Cake
1/2 cup triple-cream shortening
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup apples, finely chopped
1/2 cup baking powder
1/2 cup soda
2 cups sifted flour
1/2 cup water

with flour three times. Add flour to creamed mixture, alternating with water, mixing after each addition until smooth. Bake in two shortening-greased eight-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375°F.) thirty to thirty-five minutes. Spread karmel frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Karmel Frosting
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1 tablespoon triple-cream shortening
1/2 cup butter
1 tablespoon cream

Combine sugars, salt, milk, shortening and butter in saucepan and bring to a boil, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Cook slowly, keeping crystals washed down from sides of pan. When small amount forms a soft ball in cold water (232°F.), remove spoon and set pan aside to cool. Do not move pan until mixture is lukewarm (110°F.) and hand can rest comfortably on bottom of pan. Beat with a clean spoon until mixture thickens. Add cream and beat until thick enough to spread. All measurements in these recipes are level.

Vegetable Cooking

Green vegetables—peas, beans, asparagus and greens—should be cooked quickly in an uncovered kettle and should be served as soon as they are done. Never let vegetables stand in water.

Tasty new BRAN REFRIGERATOR ROLLS—TRY THEM

Finer hot breads and cakes with purer Spry—deep-fries without acrid smoke or odor. Spry is purer. Stays fresh longer. Creams so easily. These are mighty important advantages and only Spry gives you all three! Change to Spry for all baking and frying.

BRAN REFRIGERATOR ROLLS
2 cakes compressed yeast
1 cup lukewarm water
1/2 cup lukewarm sugar
1/2 cup Spry
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup sugar
Crumble yeast into small bowl or cup. Add lukewarm water and 1 teaspoon sugar. Let stand until it becomes light and spongy (about 15 minutes). Combine Spry, salt, sugar and yeast in large bowl and add boiling water. Stir until Spry is melted, then add milk. Add flour gradually, mixing very thoroughly until a stiff dough is formed. Take out enough dough to make desired number of rolls. Grease hands thoroughly with Spry, pinch off pieces of dough, shape into balls and place in warm place until double in bulk (about 2 hours). Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Place remaining dough in large bowl and grease with Spry. Cover and store in refrigerator for later use. Dough may be kept 2 or 3 days. Makes 3 dozen rolls. (All measurements in this recipe are level.)

Sardine Dressing

Sardine dressing is something different for that buffet supper. Mix some chopped sweet pickles, minced sardines and diced ripe olives in French dressing and serve over hard-cooked egg, tomato or plain lettuce salad. Men like this combination.

To Cook Cheese

Cook cheese at low temperature—over boiling water if possible. Intense heat will cause cheese mixtures to become tough and often curdle.

Stuffing Expands

Remember that stuffing expands when heated. So never pack it in too tightly. If it doesn't have room to expand, it will become soggy.

After North opened this deal with 1-Spade, the opponents bid to monopolize the auction.
East bid 1-No Trump, West 2-
Hearts, East 3-Clubs, West 3-
Hearts and East 4-Hearts. It so happens that this can be made easily, indeed including an overtrick.

That is about the way it sounded to South, so he came to life at this late point with a sacrifice call of 5-Diamonds, being able to read from the bidding that his partner almost certainly had support in that suit. East doubled the contract and it was set only one trick, the opponents taking one in diamonds and two in spades, a very worthwhile saving.

Sentinels Register Touchdowns in First and Final Periods

Improving Hilltopper Make 14 First Downs

Fort Hill High gridders chalked

The Sentinels, improving with every game, presented a sleek running and deadly-passing attack while the red-clad forward wall turned in its best game of the campaign. The Hilltoppers struck early, scoring twice in the first session and again in the final round. The Bulldogs pushed their lone touchdown across right before the Billy Davis, the Port Hill back with the tantalizing hip sway; Captain Grover Aronholt, and Billy Dean were a three-in-one ball-of-fire all evening in the local barbed wire, while the entire left side of the Port Hill line broke through numerous times to spill the Bulldog ball toters for good-sized losses.

Davis Scores Twice

Davis scored two of the Sentinels' three touchdowns, one of them on a sensational 51-yard dash, and Billy Dean counted the other. The Hill-top signal barker also contributed two points after touchdown, with Aronholt supplying the other singleton. Pullback Adam Frikski scored the invaders' six-pointer, going over from the six-inch line on fourth down. Wayne Stewart, Martinsburg's most consistent ground-slogger, missed the conversion when Coach John Long's crew went into pay dirt for its first score after getting possession of the leather for the second time in the initial step.

The score came when Dean snagged Aronholt's pitch in the payoff depot, the toss coming from the Martinsburg five. The same pass play, Aronholt to Dean produced the point.

Sentinels Count Again

The echoes from the Fort Hill cheering section had hardly died away when the Sentinels, like a flash out of the blue, scored again. After two Martinsburg running plays made but four yards to the Bulldog 33, following the second kickoff, Stewart punted out of bounds on the Fort Hill 49. On the first scrimmage play Davis on a

The longest run of the game was made by Bulldog Left End Henry Hare following the Sentinels' third kickoff. The Hilltop boot went to Hewart on the 15 who handed it to Hare, with the latter scampering 25 yards before being brought down by Billy Dean from behind on the port Hill 24. The visitors managed to make a first on the 14-yard mark but the locals took possession on downs on the 10 after a fourth-down pass dropped incomplete.

The Bulldogs got a break on the next play when "Lefty" Hare fumbled and P. Plick, of the West Virginians, recovered. But again a score was prevented when the Sentinel defense tightened and held

Stewart Gets Away

Two rapid pass interceptions, one by the Bulldogs and the other by the Hilltoppers gave the local aggression the leather, late in the second heat. The Sentinels, with Golden and Kronholz hugging the other, advanced the ball to the 60-yard line of the visitors but the end of the first half prevented another score.

Martinsburg's best period was the third when they outgained the winners 51 to 26 from scrimmage, with 35-yard jaunt by Stewart the highlight of the period. The drive from Martinsburg half back, crossed the Sentinel defense by running after around his end to his own after he had dropped back into the end zone to kick. Barton Boy Scouts Will Distribute 2000 Pine Trees

Purchase Made With Funds the Scouts Earned

Trees Will Be Planted Probably in April of Next Year

Barton, Oct. 20.—Two thousand pine trees will be distributed free by the Barton Troop No. 25, Boy Scouts of America, from the State Department of Forestry, it was announced today.

These twelve by eighteen-inch pine trees will be distributed free and planted in the community during the month of April, 1940, or whenever the Department of Forestry decides is the proper time. Money for the purchase of the trees came from the scouts' own funds.

The trees have been reserved and paid for at this time because the state supply is limited. Last year a thousand trees were purchased by the troop and distributed free throughout the community. A recent survey showed that over ninety-five percent of the trees are growing.

It was announced by William P. Cooper, scoutmaster, that this year two different varieties of larger trees will be received.

Barton Boy Scouts Will Distribute 2000 Pine Trees

Purchase Made With Funds the Scouts Earned

Trees Will Be Planted Probably in April of Next Year

Barton, Oct. 20.—Two thousand pine trees have been purchased by the Barton Troop No. 25, Boy Scouts of America, from the State Department of Forestry, it was announced today.

These twelve by eighteen-inch pine trees will be distributed free and planted in the community during the month of April, 1940, or whenever the Department of Forestry decides is the proper time. Money for the purchase of the trees came from the scouts' own funds.

The trees have been reserved and paid for at this time because the state supply is limited. Last year a thousand trees were purchased by the troop and distributed free throughout the community. A recent survey showed that over ninety-five percent of the trees are growing.

It was announced by William P. Cooper, scoutmaster, that this year two different varieties of larger trees will be received.

Spare Time Thief Sent to Prison For 25 Years

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 20 (P)—Nineteen "spare-time" holdups in two states brought a twenty-five-year prison sentence today for Donnie Clay Wolverton, thirty-seven-year-old former Telephone Company lineman.

He was sentenced by Circuit Judge Minter L. Wilson on one of the three indictments to which he pleaded guilty.

Wilson said he would be "lenient" in view of Wolverton's past record as a good citizen and hard worker. The defense counsel asked for the minimum sentence of ten years.

Wolverton was accused of robbing establishments in Northern West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania on his Sundays off and in his spare-time while holding his regular job. His composure broke near the end of the courtroom proceedings but he heard the sentence passed without great show of emotion.

Several Forest Fires In Northern Panhandle

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 20 (P)—Blinding smoke rolled over West Virginia's Northern Panhandle today, causing some difficulty for motorists, but the conservation commission said the forest fires in the area were not dangerous.

State Forester Dan B. Griffin, who devoted his attention mostly to scattered fires in more heavily forested areas, said Brooke county reported smoke clouds so thick motorists had trouble seeing.

Only a half dozen fires actually exist there, Griffin added, only one of which covers as much as twenty acres. Two outbuildings have been destroyed, but for the most part only grass and brush and not timberland are feeding the flames.

Griffin said there was considerable excitement in the area, attributed by him to the fact residents had never seen a "forest fire" before.

"And I don't think hunters are to blame for the fires in the Northern neck," he added. "They are probably due to children and burning brushwood. In any event, all will be under control tonight and no real danger exists."

Hospital Attempts To Save Eyesight Of Four-Year-Old

Dynamite Cap Tossed In Cookstove Causes Serious Injuries

A four-year-old boy today is in grave danger of losing his eyesight after tossing a highly explosive dynamite cap into the cookstove in his home on RFD 5, Winchester road, yesterday afternoon.

Little Paul Grabenstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Grabenstein, knew that dynamite caps went "boom." Unfortunately, the little boy wasn't familiar with the grief that can accompany the noise.

According to Allegheny hospital attendants, the child found the dynamite cap in a parked truck owned by a lime quarry near his home. The discovery of the explosive occurred while Paul was playing with several other children.

When he returned home with the dynamite cap, his mother was preoccupied with her housework. His father was working at the lime quarry.

The child tossed the cap into the red hot coals in the cook stove. The explosion brought his mother hurrying to the kitchen. She found her son burned about the eyes, face and chest.

He was taken to the hospital where attendants immediately pronounced his condition as "serious" due to the eye injuries he had received.

However, the hospital attendants said that the full extent of the eye injuries would not be fully determined until x-ray tests are taken.

Directors of the Cumberland Service of Southern States Co-operative will hold a dinner meeting Monday evening at the Algonquin hotel, it was announced yesterday by Walter D. Craig, manager.

Chief matters on the agenda include approval of a budget for the current fiscal year and review of the store's operating statement for the quarter ended Sept. 30.

Plans will also be discussed for sending a delegation to the annual meeting of the co-operative Nov. 2 to be attended by delegates from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, and North Carolina.

Members of the board of the local branch are W. H. Johnson, of Cumberland; T. G. Trenler, of Cumberland; public directors; and Wilbur L. Perrin, Flintstone; J. W. Hansel, Vale Summit; Albert O'Neal, RFD 3, Cumberland; R. C. Wilson, Rawlings; and N. S. Yoder, Pinto.

Man Gets Thirty Days For Stealing Tools Valued at Six Dollars

A sentence of thirty days in the county jail was meted out yesterday in Trial Magistrate's court to a South Cumberland man who pleaded guilty to a larceny charge.

Elmer Lightner, of 527 East Laing avenue, was given the jail term by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew after he admitted stealing carpentry tools, valued at $6, from the garage of Lex Merrill, October 18.

City Detective Robert E. Flynn preferred the charge.

At another hearing, Carl Barnes, 17, of Latrobe, Pa., was acquitted of stealing a bicycle, valued at $20, from the 14-year-old son of Mrs. Etta Creek, here here.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr., said the youth told him he found the bicycle beside the road, and took it to a nearby house where he left it. The incident occurred October 14 in the lower part of the county, he added.

The youth was taken into custody on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Creek.

Calls Sec. Perkins "Modern Delilah"

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP) — Rep. Hoffman (R-Mich.) described secretary of Labor Perkins as "A Modern Delilah" today and said she gave Elmer F. Andrews a haircut.

Andrews recently resigned as wage-hour administrator, and there were reports that he and Miss Perkins had disagreed.

Hoffman criticized Miss Perkins' handling of the labor department, saying:

"Since that lady has been working down there the Communists have had a full away."

Tries To Remove Wart On Finger with Acid, Nearly Removes Arm

The advice of a friend on how to remove a wart proved more harmful than helpful to a 17-year-old waitress early last night.

Allegheny hospital attendants said Miss Stinebaugh declared a friend told her the acid would remove a wart from one of her fingers. But while she was preparing for the "ordeal," the bottle fell over on her arm, they said.

She was released from the hospital after being treated.

City Improvement Jobs Progress At Rapid Rate

Harrison Street Job Completed Yesterday; Water Line Pushed

City improvement projects are progressing at a fast clip. City Hall officials reported yesterday.

The Harrison street project from South Central street to the B. & O. railroad was completed yesterday, and Mayor Harry Irvine declared that it was a "nice job" after a tour of inspection.

Trolley Tracks Removed

WPA, the city, and the Cumberland Contracting Company figured in this improvement project which included smoothing out the street, taking out the trolley tracks, and applying blacktop.

The trolley tracks were removed by WPA workers who also took up the brick in the center of the street. All usable bricks were carted to Cumberland street, where another repair job is in progress. The removal of the tracks gives the street the impression of being much wider, city officials commented.

The blacktop was laid down by the contracting company. It was estimated in the office of City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer that approximately 200 tons of blacktop were used. The cost of the mixture was estimated at $1484. The final estimate has not as yet been completed.

Water Line Pushed

Meanwhile, work on the important cross-town water line continued to progress. The line reached North Terrace yesterday, between Washington and Fayette streets.

The completion of the cross-town water line will prove a great boon to the fire department, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka commented yesterday.

Chief Hoenicka explained that the new line will enable the fire department to hook on at a number of former dead-ends, particularly in the North End.

The new line will also provide an increased volume and will step up pressure a few pounds, the chief said. This is due to the fact that the new line will consist entirely of the big twenty-four inch pipe, he stated.

George Street Next

It was also reported yesterday at City Hall that city workers will proceed to blacktop George street now that the Harrison street project is completed.

Although street improvement projects are progressing nicely, Mayor Irvine reported this week that no new developments had occurred in regard to a contemplated overhead bridge planned to eliminate railroad crossings for traffic in the busy downtown sector.

"We haven't a thing to report on that now," the mayor said. "We are waiting on a promised visit from the members of the State Road Commission. They have promised to inspect a possible site and give us their advice."

Have You Seen It Yet? That's the Question Around City Hall

"Have you been down to see it yet, Sam?" inquired Mayor Harry Irvine yesterday as he lit up another stogie.

"Why no, I haven't," apologized City Hall Clerk Samuel Griminger. "I fully intended to this noon, but I didn't get around to it."

"Have you been down to see it yet?" the mayor inquired of Andrew Bender and Theodore George a few minutes later in the water department office.

"Yes, we were down," both declared.

"Sure is nice, isn't it?" opined the mayor expansively as he thoughtfully puffed the stogie.

"Sure is," both agreed.

What on earth was this thing the City Hall boys were all going down to see—a carnival, a bathing beauty contest, or one of the new automobiles?

An inquiry revealed that it was the Harrison street project that was completed yesterday. Everybody at City Hall declared it was beautiful.

Who says the City Hall boys don't take pride in their work?

St. Mary's Fair Planned Nov. 15-18

At a well-attended meeting held in St. Mary's auditorium Thursday evening, the promoters and workers outlined plans for the annual St. Mary's Parish Fair scheduled for Nov. 15-18 at St. Mary's auditorium on Oldtown road. Organization of committees to promote the fair were considered Thursday night.

Assistant Chief Observes 25th Year Of Fire-Fighting, Recalls Old Days

Interviewing Assistant Fire Chief J. E. Brennan last night proved a difficult proposition.

Despite the fact that Assistant Chief Brennan was celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary as a member of the Cumberland department, his conferees at the firehouse refused to allow him to be interviewed in dignity.

Wisecracks Fly

Dignity is something the lads at the Central fire station just ain't got, and consequently the smoke-eaters hurled a rapid-fire barrage of wisecracks at Brennan throughout the entire episode.

Not that the wisecracks perturbed Brennan in the slightest. After a fellow has lived at the fire station for twenty-five years he becomes hardened to that sort of thing.

As Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka remarked earlier in the day, "Brennan is a damned good firefighter and a hog for punishment."

Didn't Plan To Stay

Sprawled out comfortably in one of the fire station's easier chairs (they have two), Brennan related that he mustered into the city fire department in 1914.

"At the time, I didn't think I'd stay long," he remarked. "You see, the boys worked ninety-six hours at a stretch at that time. Then they had twenty-four hours off."

"Prior to that time I worked on the B. & O. and for a while I thought I'd soon go back. But I didn't."

In some respects, fire-fighting was a more picturesque business back in 1914 than it is today, Brennan said. But it wasn't as safe.

Recalls Horse-Drawn Wagons

For one thing, horse-drawn hay-burners were still in vogue back in those days. The sight of two galloping horses, with manes flying, drawing a glaring red fire-wagon, is a thrill that present-day youngsters missed.

But the horses soon went, and with them one of the most interesting phases in firefighting history. Then the first fire truck appeared. It was faster and more efficient. With the advent of the fire truck, fire companies became more and more efficient.

Assistant Chief Brennan has served at three of the four Cumberland fire stations. They are the West and South Side and finally the Central station on the City Hall Plaza. Somehow, he missed the East Side station, he said.

First Illness Recently

Although Brennan has fought hundreds of fires, some of them whoppers, it wasn't until several months ago that he ever became sick while engaged in putting out a conflagration.

This was the occasion of the comparatively minor fire at Keech's Drug Store in the South End. Brennan led his men into the building which was emitting an unusual, dark and pungent smoke.

Brennan and company put out the fire. But they came out cough-

Woman, 61, Found Dead in Bathtub

Drowned after Fall, Authorities Report

A verdict of accidental death was given last night by Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, in the case of Mrs. Lillie Jones, Oldtown road housewife, who was found dead in her bathtub early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Jones, 61, who had been ill for some time, was discovered by her husband, James E. Jones, approximately fifteen minutes after his wife entered the bathroom and closed the door.

A bruise on the victim's forehead indicated that she fell. Blood found in the bathtub was caused by strangulation, it was reported.

According to Miss Ruth Stafford, 19, who was employed in the Jones household, Mrs. Jones appeared at the bathroom door shortly after 9 a. m. The girl said she had been tidying up and left when Mrs. Jones said she was going to take a bath.

When Miss Stafford called Mrs. Jones a few minutes later she received no reply. She found the bathroom door locked. Mr. Jones, who operates a filling station on the ground floor of the residence, was immediately summoned by Miss Stafford.

Mrs. Jones climbed a ladder and entered the bathroom through a window. He found his wife in the tub, which was overflowing.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle, Detective Sgt. B. Frank Gaffney, Sgt. Raymond Johnston and Officers Curtis Kime and John W. Smallwood arrived at the home a few minutes after Mr. Jones called.

The officers attempted to revive the woman with an inhalator but failed. Both Dr. Corson and the officers stated that Mrs. Jones, who was in a weakened condition, apparently slipped and fell while preparing to bathe.

Mrs. Jones was born in this section and was the daughter of the late George and Sarah Smith. She was a member of Mapleide Methodist church.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a son, Carl Jones, an employee of the City of Cumberland, who was operating a steam roller in front of his home when the accident occurred; two sisters, Mrs. Emma High, Akron, O., and Mrs. Elliott Jenkins, Keyser, W. Va.; and three brothers, John Smith, Flata, W. Va.; and Frank and Charles Smith, of Cumberland.

Good Reason for It

Reason for that particularly black smoke and odor was the fact that the fire got into a bunch of chemicals and other drug store materials, Brennan said. It stunk something terrible, he declared.

Big fires recalled by the assistant chief included the Glass House fire, when the men worked for seventeen straight hours without relief. Bennett's warehouse, Bernstein's warehouse, the Cumberland Improvement Company's warehouse, and the Bayer Grocery Store.

(Meanwhile, the good natured heckling from the sidelines increased as Brennan continued to dig up ancient history.)

"(Putting up with these guys is a tougher job than fighting any fire," the assistant chief said with a grin.)

Casualties Decrease

Casualties in the fire department have been few in the last twenty-five years, Brennan said. There have been two fatal accidents. Fireman George Miller was struck down by a patrol wagon as he stepped off the fire engine. He died later at a hospital.

The other accident victim was James Valentine, who fell off a ladder while department members were practicing scaling a wall in front of the firehouse.

There were nineteen men on the Cumberland department when Brennan first went to work. Now there are thirty-four.

'Young Guy'—Just Starting

Assistant Chief Brennan makes his home at 13 West Oldtown road. He indicates that he is just beginning to get really interested in the fire-fighting game and will probably continue answering telephones at headquarters for many years to come.

Recalling that many of those robust fire fighters of the horse and buggy era sported walrus mustaches, Brennan, accordingly, was asked if he had ever been guilty of this offense.

"Hey, wait a minute," he barked. "I'm just a young guy."

Memorial Hospital Has 15-Minute Dry Spell As Water Main Bursts

Memorial hospital was without water yesterday afternoon for fifteen minutes.

This brief shortage occurred when the main pipeline from the big tank on Constitution Hill suddenly blew out in three places at an elbow.

Water line employees worked fast. They quickly hooked up the hospital with a subsidiary line and then repaired the broken elbow.

Few people at the hospital even know what happened.

Drunken Driving Cases Feature Appeals Docket

2 Convictions Upheld One Over-Ruled; Several Plead Guilty

Circuit court was moving today toward a rapid clearing of its criminal appeals docket, with a score of cases disposed of yesterday.

Two convictions on drunken driving charges were upheld and one overruled.

In addition, several other drunken driving cases were disposed of when the appellants pleaded guilty or failed to appear.

A jury upheld the lower court in convicting Garrie L. Miller of driving drunk, but found him not guilty of reckless driving.

Associate Judge William A. Huster imposed the same fine as that given by the magistrate and ordered payment of costs.

Miller was represented by Attorney Edward J. Ryan.

A. B. Teter was convicted by Judge Huster of drunken and reckless driving after he waived trial by jury.

Fines of $101 and costs were suspended for a year, however. Teter was represented by Attorney Clarence Shutter.

The lone appellant acquitted of driving drunk was Charles T. Riddle, whose counsel was also Attorney Shutter. He was likewise found not guilty of reckless driving.

Judge Huster, who tried the case after Riddle waived jury trial, found him not guilty because he said the state failed to identify the defendant as the driver of a car involved in a hit-skip crash on South Lee street in August.

Pleas of guilty in drunken driving cases were entered by John M. Shipway and Ray A. Custer, while conviction of Elmer Clingerman was affirmed when he failed to appear for trial.

Shipway's fine of $100 was ordered paid, along with the costs. State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris dismissed a reckless driving charge, for which Shipway had been fined $25.

Custer was given until the January term of court to pay his fine of $100.

Clingerman's conviction of reckless driving for which he had been fined $10, was likewise affirmed.

Earlier, Judge Huster had fined Jesse J. Roach $100 and costs for drunken driving, of which he had been convicted by a jury the day before. He was also ordered to pay $25 to County Commissioner Harry W. Matheny for damage inflicted to his car in an alleged hit-run accident last February.

The state's attorney dismissed charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident, of which a magistrate had convicted Roach.

Other cases dismissed by the state included: Roger Willison, reckless driving; Lynn Swearingen, reckless driving; Marshall Burch, assault; William Thrasher, who had been sentenced in juvenile court to a year in the House of Correction for contributing to the delinquency of a minor; and Clarence Vanmeter, who had been given a suspended sentence of 18 months in the House of Correction by Juvenile Magistrate Elizabeth R. Menefee for assault.

A jury found William Darr not guilty of assault. Darr was represented by Attorney Elmer B. Gower.

Appeals dismissed by the traversers included Frank Lincoln, disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace; Robert Dennison, habitual drunkenness; and Joseph L. Ryan, reckless driving.

The jury panel was dismissed until Monday morning, when the remaining criminal appeals will be considered.

Grace Funk, Fort Ashby, W. Va.; two brothers, Clayton Tiptie, Youngstown, O.; and Earl Tiptie, Nelsonville, O.; and a sister, Myrtle Sparkman, of Birmingham, Alabama.

Burial will be in Ashbury Cemetery, Bean's Settlement, W. Va.

Man To Be Freed From Prison On Technicality

Faulty Docket Entries Result In Quashing Of Juvenile Court Case

Because he was allegedly deprived of his constitutional right to a jury trial, a Cumberland man is scheduled to be freed soon from the House of Correction.

He is Walter Carroll, who appealed his conviction in juvenile court on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The appeal was scheduled for trial yesterday in Circuit court, but Associate Judge William A. Huster ordered the case quashed on motion of Defense Attorney Simon P. Riley.

Mr. Riley proved that the docket entries sent up from the lower court by Juvenile Magistrate Elizabeth R. Menefee failed to show that Carroll had been informed of his right to a jury trial, as required by law. The case was ordered quashed on this ground.

Carroll was tried on the charge early in July, sentenced to two years in the House of Correction, and committed to the Jessups Cut institution almost immediately. The case was appealed shortly afterwards.

Mr. Riley said yesterday that he would institute formal habeas corpus proceedings today to obtain his client's release.

Another juvenile court case also was quashed on the same grounds, but the appellant has been free on bond rather than in prison.

The second case was that of James Charles Guthridge, accused of failure to support his minor child. He was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction and paroled with the provision that he support the child. He was later re-arrested and the sentence imposed when he was found guilty of failing to keep the terms of the suspended sentence.

Although the docket entries showed that he had pleaded guilty, they failed to show that he had been informed of his right to a jury trial, Attorney Edward J. Ryan proved, and the case was ordered quashed.

Hospital Attempts To Save Eyesight Of Four-Year-Old

Dynamite Cap Tossed In Cookstove Causes Serious Injuries

A four-year-old boy today is in grave danger of losing his eyesight after tossing a highly explosive dynamite cap into the cookstove in his home on RFD 3, Winchester road, yesterday afternoon.

Little Paul Grabenstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Grabenstein, knew that dynamite caps went "boom." Unfortunately, the little boy wasn't familiar with the gift that can accompany the noise.

According to Allegheny hospital attendants, the child found the dynamite cap in a parked truck owned by a lime quarry near his home. The discovery of the explosive occurred while Paul was playing with several other children.

When he returned home with the dynamite cap, his mother was preoccupied with her housework. His father was working at the lime quarry.

The child tossed the cap into the red hot coals in the cook stove. The explosion brought his mother hurrying to the kitchen. She found her son burned about the eyes, face and chest.

He was taken to the hospital where attendants immediately pronounced his condition as "serious" due to the eye injuries he had received.

However, the hospital attendants said that the full extent of the eye injuries would not be fully determined until x-ray tests are taken.

Man Gets Thirty Days For Stealing Tools Valued at Six Dollars

A sentence of thirty days in the county jail was meted out yesterday in Trial Magistrate court to a South Cumberland man who pleaded guilty to a larceny charge.

Elmer Lightner, of 527 East Laine avenue, was given the jail term by Magistrate Frank A. Perdue after he admitted stealing carpentry tools, valued at $6, from the garage of Lex Merrill, October 18.

City Detective Robert E. Flynn preferred the charge.

At another hearing, Carl Barnes, 17, of Latrobe, Pa., was acquitted of stealing a bicycle, valued at $20, from the 14-year-old son of Mrs. Etta Creek, here here.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. said the youth told him he found the bicycle beside the road, and took it to a nearby house where he left it. The incident occurred October 14 in the lower part of the county, he added.

The youth was taken into custody on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Creek.

Tries To Remove Wart On Finger With Acid, Nearly Removes Arm

The advice of a friend on how to remove a wart proved more harmful than helpful to a 17-year-old waitress early last night.

Allegheny hospital attendants said Miss Stinebaugh declared a friend told her the acid would remove a wart from one of her fingers. But while she was preparing for the "ordeal," the bottle fell over on her arm, they said.

She was released from the hospital after being treated.

City Improvement Jobs Progress At Rapid Rate

Harrison Street Job Completed Yesterday; Water Line Pushed

City improvement projects are progressing at a fast clip. City Hall officials reported yesterday.

The Harrison street project from South Centre street to the B. & O. railroad was completed yesterday, and Mayor Harry Irvine declared that it was a "nice job" after a tour of inspection.

Trolley Tracks Removed

WPA, the city, and the Cumberland Contracting Company figured in this improvement project which included smoothing out the street, taking out the trolley tracks, and applying blacktop.

The trolley tracks were removed by WPA workers who also took up the brick in the center of the street. All usable bricks were carried to Cumberland street, where another repair job is in progress. The removal of the tracks gives the street the impression of being much wider, city officials commented.

The blacktop was laid down by the contracting company. It was estimated in the office of City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer that approximately 200 tons of blacktop were used. The cost of the mixture was estimated at $1,484. The final estimate has not as yet been completed.

Water Line Pushed

Meanwhile, work on the important cross-town water line continued to progress. The line reached North Terrace yesterday, between Washington and Fayette streets.

The completion of the cross-town water line will prove a great boon to the fire department. Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicke commented yesterday.

Chief Hoenicke explained that the new line will enable the fire department to hook on at a number of former dead-ends, particularly in the North End.

The new line will also provide an increased volume and will step up pressure a few pounds, the chief said. This is due to the fact that the new line will consist entirely of the big twenty-four inch pipe, he stated.

George Street Next

It was also reported yesterday at City Hall that city workers will proceed to blacktop George street now that the Harrison street project is completed.

Although street improvement projects are progressing nicely, Mayor Irvine reported this week that no new developments had occurred in regard to a contemplated overhead bridge planned to eliminate railroad crossings for traffic in the busy downtown sector.

"We haven't a thing to report on that now," the mayor said. "We are waiting on a promised visit from the members of the State Road Commission. They have promised to inspect a possible site and give us their advice."

Have You Seen It Yet? That's the Question Around City Hall

"Have you been down to see it yet, Sam?" inquired Mayor Harry Irvine yesterday as he lit up another stogie.

"Why no, I haven't," apologized City Hall Clerk Samuel Griminger. "I fully intended to this noon, but I didn't get around to it."

"Have you been down to see it yet?" the mayor inquired of Andrew Bender and Theodore George a few minutes later in the water department office.

"Yes, we were down," both declared.

"Sure is nice, isn't it?" opined the mayor expansively as he thoughtfully puffed the stogie.

"Sure is," both agreed.

What on earth was this thing the City Hall boys were all going down to see—a carnival, a bathing beauty contest, or one of the new automobiles?

An inquiry revealed that it was the Harrison street project that was completed yesterday. Everybody at City Hall declared it was beautiful. Who says the City Hall boys don't take pride in their work?

Assistant Chief Observes 25th Year Of Fire-Fighting, Recalls Old Days

Interviewing Assistant Fire Chief J. E. Brennan last night proved a difficult proposition.

Despite the fact that Assistant Chief Brennan was celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary as a member of the Cumberland department, his conferees at the firehouse refused to allow him to be interviewed in dignity.

Wisecracks Fly

Dignity is something the lads at the Central fire station just ain't got, and consequently the smoke-eaters hurled a rapid-fire barrage of wisecracks at Brennan throughout the entire episode.

Not that the wisecracks perturbed Brennan in the slightest. After a fellow has lived at the fire station for twenty-five years he becomes hardened to that sort of thing.

As Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicke remarked earlier in the day, "Brennan is a damned good firefighter and a hog for punishment."

Didn't Plan To Stay

Sprawled out comfortably in one of the fire station's easier chairs (they have two), Brennan related that he mustered into the city fire department in 1914.

"At the time, I didn't think I'd stay long," he remarked. "You see, the boys worked ninety-six hours at a stretch at that time. Then they had twenty-four hours off."

"Prior to that time I worked on the B&O, and for a while I thought I'd soon go back. But I didn't."

In some respects, fire-fighting was a more picturesque business back in 1914 than it is today, Brennan said. But it wasn't as safe.

Recalls Horse-Drawn Wagons

For one thing, horse-drawn hay-burners were still in vogue back in those days. The sight of two galloping horses, with manes flying, drawing a glaring red fire-wagon, is a thrill that present-day youngsters missed.

But the horses soon went, and with them one of the most interesting phases in firefighting history. Then the first fire truck appeared. It was faster and more efficient.

With the advent of the fire truck, fire companies became more and more efficient.

Assistant Chief Brennan has served at three of the four Cumberland fire stations. They are the West and South Side and finally the Central station on the City Hall Plaza. Somehow, he missed the East Side station, he said.

First Illness Recently

Although Brennan has fought hundreds of fires, some of them whoppers, it wasn't until several months ago that he ever became sick while engaged in putting out a conflagration.

This was the occasion of the comparatively minor fire at Keech's Drug Store in the South End. Brennan led his men into the building which was emitting an unusual dark and pungent smoke.

Brennan and company put out the fire. But they came out cough-

Woman, 61, Found Dead in Bathtub

Drowned after Fall, Authorities Report

A verdict of accidental death was given last night by Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, in the case of Mrs. Lillie Jones, Oldtown road housewife, who was found dead in her bathtub early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Jones, 61, who had been ill for some time, was discovered by her husband, James E. Jones, approximately fifteen minutes after his wife entered the bathroom and closed the door.

A bruise on the victim's forehead indicated that she fell. Blood found in the bathtub was caused by strangulation, it was reported.

According to Miss Ruth Stafford, 19, who was employed in the Jones household, Mrs. Jones appeared at the bathroom door shortly after 9 a. m. The girl said she had been tidying up and left when Mrs. Jones said she was going to take a bath.

When Miss Stafford called Mrs. Jones a few minutes later she received no reply. She found the bathroom door locked. Mr. Jones, who operates a filling station on the ground floor of the residence, was immediately summoned by Miss Stafford.

Mr. Jones climbed a ladder and entered the bathroom through a window. He found his wife in the tub, which was overflowing.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle, Detective Sgt. B. Frank Gaffney, Sgt. Raymond Johnston and Officers Curtis Kline and John W. Smallwood arrived at the home a few minutes after Mr. Jones called.

The officers attempted to revive the woman with an inhalator but failed. Both Dr. Corson and the officers stated that Mrs. Jones, who was in a weakened condition, apparently slipped and fell while preparing to bathe.

Mrs. Jones was born in this section and was the daughter of the late George and Sarah Smith. She was a member of Mapleide Methodist church.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a son, Carl Jones, an employee of the City of Cumberland, who was operating a steam roller in front of his home when the accident occurred; two sisters, Mrs. James High, Akron, O., and Mrs. Elliott Jenkins, Keyser, W. Va.; and three brothers, John Smith, Platts, W. Va.; and Frank and Charles Smith, of Cumberland.

Good Reason for It

Reason for that particularly black smoke and odor was the fact that the fire got into a bunch of chemicals and other drug store materials, Brennan said. It stunk something terrible, he declared.

Big fires recalled by the assistant chief included the Glass House fire, when the men worked for seventeen straight hours without relief. Bennett's warehouse, Bernstein's warehouse, the Cumberland Improvement Company's warehouse, and the Bayer Grocery Store.

(Meanwhile, the good natured heckling from the sidelines increased as Brennan continued to dig up ancient history.)

"(Putting up with these guys is a tougher job than fighting any fire," the assistant chief said with a grin.)

Casualties Decrease

Casualties in the fire department have been few in the last twenty-five years, Brennan said. There have been two fatal accidents. Fireman George Miller was struck down by a patrol wagon as he stepped off the fire engine. He died later at a hospital.

The other accident victim was James Valentine, who fell off a ladder while department members were practicing scaling a wall in front of the firehouse.

There were nineteen men on the Cumberland department when Brennan first went to work. Now there are thirty-four.

'Young Guy'—Just Starting

Assistant Chief Brennan makes his home at 13 West Oldtown road. He indicates that he is just beginning to get really interested in the fire-fighting game and will probably continue answering telephones at headquarters for many years to come.

Recalling that many of those robust fire fighters of the horse and buggy era sported walrus mustaches, Brennan, accordingly, was asked if he had ever been guilty of this offense.

"Hey, wait a minute," he barked. "I'm just a young guy."

Memorial Hospital Has 15-Minute Dry Spell As Water Main Bursts

Memorial hospital was without water yesterday afternoon for fifteen minutes.

This brief shortage occurred when the main pipeline from the big tank on Constitution Hill suddenly blew out in three places at an elbow.

Water line employees worked fast. They quickly hooked up the hospital with a subsidiary line and then repaired the broken elbow.

Few people at the hospital even know what happened.

Drunken Driving Cases Feature Appeals Docket

2 Convictions Upheld One Over-Ruled; Several Plead Guilty

Circuit court was moving today toward a rapid clearing of its criminal appeals docket, with a score of cases disposed of yesterday.

Two convictions on drunken driving charges were upheld and one overruled.

In addition, several other drunken driving cases were disposed of when the appellants pleaded guilty or failed to appear.

A jury upheld the lower court in convicting Garrie L. Miller of driving drunk, but found him not guilty of reckless driving.

Associate Judge William A. Huster imposed the same fine as that given by the magistrate and ordered payment of costs.

Miller was represented by Attorney Edward J. Ryan.

A. B. Teter was convicted by Judge Huster of drunken and reckless driving after he waived trial by jury.

Fines of $101 and costs were suspended for a year, however.

Teter was represented by Attorney Clarence Shutter.

The lone appellant acquitted of driving drunk was Charles T. Riddle, whose counsel was also Attorney Shutter. He was likewise found not guilty of reckless driving.

Judge Huster, who tried the case after Riddle waived jury trial, found him not guilty because he said the state failed to identify the defendant as the driver of a car involved in a hit-skip crash on South Lee street in August.

Pleas of guilty in drunken driving cases were entered by John M. Shipway and Ray A. Custer, while conviction of Elmer Clingerman was affirmed when he failed to appear for trial.

Shipway's fine of $100 was ordered paid, along with the costs. State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris dismissed a reckless driving charge, for which Shipway had been fined $25.

Custer was given until the January term of court to pay his fine of $100.

Clingerman's conviction of reckless driving for which he had been fined $10, was likewise affirmed.

Earlier, Judge Huster had fined Jesse J. Roach $100 and costs for drunken driving, of which he had been convicted by a jury the day before. He was also ordered to pay $25 to County Commissioner Harry W. Matheny for damage inflicted to his car in an alleged hit-run accident last February.

The state's attorney dismissed charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident, of which a magistrate had convicted Roach.

Other cases dismissed by the state included: Roger Willison, reckless driving; Lynn Swearingen, reckless driving; Marshall Burch, assault; William Thrasher, who had been sentenced in juvenile court to a year in the House of Correction for contributing to the delinquency of a minor; and Clarence Vanmeter, who had been given a suspended sentence of 18 months in the House of Correction by Juvenile Magistrate Elizabeth R. Menefee for assault.

A jury found William Darr not guilty of assault. Darr was represented by Attorney Elmer B. Gower.

Appeals dismissed by the traversers included Frank Lincoln, disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace; Robert Dennison, habitual drunkenness; and Joseph L. Ryan, reckless driving.

The jury panel was dismissed until Monday morning, when the remaining criminal appeals will be considered.

Grace Funk, Port Ashby, W. Va.; two brothers, Clayton Tiptie, Youngstown, O.; and Earl Tiptie, Nelsonville, O.; and a sister, Myrtle Sparkman, of Birmingham, Alabama.
